Accusations fly as desal flier intensifies debate

By PAUL WOLF

As BATTLE lines on the proposed desalination plant in Sand City are starting to form, the strife among peninsula water board members is pre-election business-as-usual.

The game is familiar: accuse your opponents of not fighting fair.

What has raised the pitch of the desal debate is the recent distribution of an eye-catching, four-page flier titled "Save Our Money for the Dam."

Developed by board member Dick Heuer and endorsed by a varied list of names, it urges voters not to authorize the construction of a $32 million desalting facility when the issue comes to the June 8 ballot.

"His (Heuer's) whole intent is to discredit desal," said water director Dale Hekhuis, a project supporter who, along with other board members, has accused Heuer of "fabrications," "distortions," and playing loose with the facts.

■ Analysis: Directors face ballot without consensus

But Heuer uses some of the same terms when speaking of desal proponents. "The strategy of this election obviously is to try and discredit Dick Heuer, since I am leading the opposition. And I think it is demeaning to the whole board."

Director Fran Farina, another desal opponent, sides with Heuer. She said she was "personally very embarrassed" that Hekhuis used the "director's report" portion of the agenda as a springboard for lambasting the Heuer camp.

"I certainly don't think this is appropriate use of a board meeting," said Heuer.

The discord over the flier has made at least one thing clear: Directors have no consensus on desal as they look toward the election. That could not be a comfort to a district that is under tremendous pressure to bring a new water-supply project to fruition. A grand jury recently recommended the district disband if it couldn't fulfill its charge of developing new water sources.

When directors scheduled the election many weeks ago, they agreed that accurate and neutral information should be presented to the public. But there was nothing to prevent aggressive campaigning from individual directors.

"Individuals have the right to do what

New city administrator

Kersnar promises to listen first, act later

By PAUL WOLF

JERE KERSNAR

Jere KERSNAR leaned back in his chair and let out a sigh.

For Carmel's newly chosen City Administrator, the memory is still fresh of massive layoffs at his last town — Cathedral City, Calif. — where the recession hit in August 1990 like a sudden, unexpected blow.

He was assistant city manager for the desert town of 35,000, just minutes away from Palm Springs. The population had more than tripled in less than a decade. So when the growth came to a screeching halt, nearly 10 percent of the city staff had to be let go right away.

As Kersnar's experience bears out, "downzoning" has not been a term with exclusive relevance to Carmel. Despite the hardships he's dealt with, he still considers himself a fiscal conservative who is not willing to cut corners when tough decisions must be made.

"I will never recommend a budget that is unbalanced," he said, as if making a campaign promise. "I am not for the notion that you spend down your reserves to balance the budget."

Continued support for DLI urged to avoid future 'hit'

By SCOTT BREARTON

The CARMEL business community is breathing a collective sigh of relief this week after hearing the news that Monterey's Defense Language Institute has been spared in the latest round of base closures.

"I think it (the DLI closure) would've been a real tragedy, not only for the economy, but for the large group of highly-educated people they bring to the Peninsula," said Carmel Mayor Ken White.

"We're really breathing a deep sigh of relief," said Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association. "It would have had a tremendous negative impact on the entire economy of the Monterey Peninsula, including Carmel."

White said he suspects there may be another "hit list" coming up in the next couple years. "We've got to keep very active and vigilant in support of the Defense Language Institute," White noted.

The official news came from Washington March 11, when Secretary of Defense Les Aspin announced that the DLI was not included on the latest base closure list. The news led some to speculate that Leon Panetta, director of the Office of Management and Budget and former Monterey Congressman, may have exerted some of his influence in Washington D.C.

"He (Leon) is very pleased with the decision and he thinks it was the right decision, said Barry Toiv, spokesperson for Panetta.

No comment

Regarding any lobbying that Panetta may have done in Washington, Toiv said, "I don't have any comment on that."

Similarly, Panetta's wife Sylvia refused to comment on her husband's influence in the decision, but offered her own feelings about the end result.

"I'm delighted to hear that the DLI will remain, not just because Fort Ord is downsizing, but also because the plans

It's all-or-nothing for parking permit plan

By PAUL WOLF

The DETAILS of the plan are still in dispute, and people vary in their overall vision of how to improve parking in the village.

But what is evident is that a key ingredient of the multi-phase "action plan" — permits to everyone who parks in Carmel's residential district — may be an all-or-nothing affair.

The idea is that tourists should park downtown, or at or near their places of lodging. Meanwhile, downtown employees should park outside of the commercial sector, either in lots or the residential zones. The goals here are that they don't deny precious spaces to potential customers.

The permit program doesn't address the issue of parking supply, but it could create a certain kind of order, according to committee chairman Alan Williams.

THE DAILY scene in Carmel: clogged parking in the downtown. The parking plan under study assumes parking in the commercial sector should be left for shoppers, and employees should be have some place to go outside of the downtown. (Lowell Northrop photo)

But here is the catch: The program would collapse if the permits were not a requirement for everyone. That knowledge brings home what Acting Planning Director Brian Roseth has said: "This parking plan will effect everyone."

If, say, the city were to require parking permits for tourists but not employees, enforcement would not be possible. In

Dazzling dixie musicians

Dear Editor:

Hats off to the Carmel High School Music Department and to Mr. Richard Robins director, in particular!

The Wednesday night performance at Sunset Auditorium and the Dixieland Band performances at the three day Dixieland Monterey Festival were outstanding.

It is my hope that Dixieland music will be encouraged especially with our younger musicians so that "Dixie" will be with us for a long time. Mr. Robins is doing an outstanding job of teaching his young student musicians about this form of American music.

Congratulations on great performances and best wishes for continued success.

Mudslinging muddles issue

Dear Editor:

It is unfortunate that the landlords and supporters of the rezoning in Carmel have chosen to unleash their attack dogs (see recent letters in your newspaper.)

The slanderous personal attacks on the leaders of the anti-rezoning forces are an obvious attempt to divert the attention of the voters from discussion of the issues.

The reason for this is self-evident: the weak arguments presented in favor of the rezoning of the commercial district won't convince anyone. So, they resort to mudslinging and personal attacks.

Citizens Against Rezoning will not respond in kind. We intend to publish and disseminate as much factual material as possible. We are certain that, given the facts, the voters will see that the rezoning benefits only the landlords. Certain property owners will reap huge additional profits by replacing shops that serve local needs with even more gift shops, art galleries, jewelry stores, take-out food stores, etc.

The losers will be owners of small businesses who will see their rents escalate further, and the residents of Carmel, who will see further loss of shops and services that meet their needs.

We will all eventually lose if the rezoning is allowed to stand. More and more residents of the surrounding areas and tourists are choosing to avoid Carmel because of traffic congestion and parking problems.

The future of Carmel is at stake. Informed public discourse is needed, not mudslinging and reckless personal attacks.

Middle School students speak out on Hatton Canyon freeway

Editor's note: The Carmel Pine Cone received more than 50 letters from Carmel Middle School students on the Hatton Canyon freeway. In the interest of space, we chose five letters, which represent a cross-section of the youths' viewpoints. All but one letter voiced displeasure with the proposed project.

What about the animals?

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter concerning the issue of the Hatton Canyon freeway. I realize that we do have a slight traffic problem; but the idea of tearing down miles of beautiful flora and fauna to replace it with cold slabs of concrete disgusts me. For the four and a half years that I've lived here, I've always enjoyed looking at the massive trees that fill the canyon. Every child should have the opportunity to grow up near such a interesting environment, in its natural state.

The town of Carmel was not meant for long freeways, traffic and pollution. With the completion of this freeway both people and animals will lose their homes. It's easy for people to pick up and start over, but what about the poor animals who have lived their whole lives in the wilderness. How will they survive by a noisy, polluting freeway? The world is already polluted enough, I don't think we need another freeway to contribute to the problem.

I hope you take all my points into consideration. Thank you for reading my letter.

Allison Kistenmacher

We need this freeway

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter because I am in favor of the Hatton Canyon Freeway. I am in favor of this freeway because it will cut traffic time in half. On Sunday afternoon the traffic is ridiculous. Sometimes it takes 45 minutes just to get to Longs Drug Store from downtown Carmel or the Carmel Highlands. I believe that if the Hatton Canyon Freeway existed this would not happen. I understand that the Hatton Canyon is a lush marsh land, but we have plenty of preserved forests and marsh lands not only on the Monterey Peninsula but throughout the State of California. I understand that the people against this freeway want to preserve this precious land, but 100 years ago even their houses were sitting on marsh land. If no one would have pushed to have Carmel developed, then none of us would be living in this beautiful area. It is only normal that there be some development, and I don't feel that it is fair or right that since my land has been developed to build my house and now I am happy, all future development should be stopped entirely We need this freeway!

Matthew R. Borek

Preserve the memories

Dear Editor:

I think that Hatton Canyon is a beautiful place and should be preserved for years to come. I want my children to be able to see this beautiful place and their children to be able to see it too. I think that if the Canyon is destroyed you are wrecking animals' homes and destroying a beautiful wilderness. It is wrong to destroy any wilderness. I have had many beautiful memories in the Canyon and I don't want to see my memories die. I want other people to have memories too.

Adam Zerbe

Another San Jose?!

Dear Editor:

I am against building a freeway through Hatton Canyon. Hatton Canyon is full of plant and animal life. This should be preserved for generations to come.

Putting a freeway through Hatton Canyon will make our lovely city look like San Jose! Not only will we look like a big city, but our community will be divided with a wall. Our goal in this community is to be unique and take care of what we have. The goal is not to look like any other big city in America. Tourists come here to relax and enjoy this environment, not be a part of the hustle and bustle of a freeway city. Is a 10 minute wait that bad when you consider what is at stake?

Please do not take the beauty of my home away from me, and my children.

Elizabeth McVey

Consider the alternatives

Dear Editor:

This new freeway would cause a lot of traffic buildup northbound on Highway 1, therefore creating more pollution in the atmosphere. I plan on showing my children where I grew up, and I would be very sad to have to tell them something like, "This highway over here used to be a beautiful wetland area, before it was thoughtlessly cut down."

Please consider the alternatives.

Water directors face ballot without consensus

they want to do," said MPWMD General Manager Jim Cofer, who, as the top staff person, is trying hard to himself keep out of the fray.

Cofer, however, did say Heuer's flier contained "improper comparisons" — especially where the director juxtaposed projected costs for desal water and dam water. "From a technical standpoint, staff disagrees with the numbers," Cofer said.

The staff will publish its own materials and newspaper inserts in coming weeks, according to Cofer.

Position paper

But the flier is more of position paper than fact sheet, filled with anti-desal arguments and sensational headlines. It asserts the desal facility is not needed and, most significantly, that pursuing it would undermine the long-term goal of developing a new dam on the Carmel River.

Supporters of desal say a dam will not be constructed until the year 2002 at the earliest, and desalination is needed as insurance in the interim.

Opponents say the voters will be put in the position of choosing between the two projects. (The five members of the Carmel City Council agree with that interpretation.)

"I don't think as board members we should be out politicizing issues and stumping for one side or the other," said Director Jim Hughes.

Using bolder terms, Director David Pendergrass said, "Propaganda is erroneous; it isn't loyal."

Since a central charge of the water district is to develop new water sources, Heuer and Farina's opposition may seem, to some, just that — disloyal.

In any case, they are in a tough position, as a majority of the board favors desal and the staff, although officially neutral, stands by its proposal as a work of solid planning.

"There is a pride of ownership," Cofer said of the desal plant. "Our studies indicate it (a desal facility) is needed, although it is not up to staff to decide."

Hekhuis noted a lurid headline in Heuer's flier that reads, "De$alination Costs Go Up and UP and UP and UP." And the article, he said, is "pure hype." Hekhuis noted the 1987 advisory election on the dam was accompanied by a similar split on the board — and sensational campaigning.

In the end, what may be "distortion" to one side is effective campaigning to the other. The two concepts frequently get blurred, especially before an election. No doubt, peninsula residents should expect more such highly-charged exchanges.

Water board establishes five new voter divisions

By PAUL WOLF

THE PENINSULA water board has taken action to establish five voter divisions within the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to replace the current format of at-large elections.

"This is fundamentally a matter of equity," said Director Dale Hekhuis, striking the keynote of the 5-2 vote.

The majority of the board and those speaking at the public hearing Monday, March 15, described the plan as a victory for the principle of "one man, one vote."

The plan was recommended by the 21-person Voter District Advisory Committee. Like the new county redistricting program, the plan parceled out the district in an effort to affirm minority voting strength.

The district, unlike the county, is not obligated to restructure its election procedures; it is doing so voluntarily, under the guidelines of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Here are the voter wards in simple outline:

- Division 1: Seaside and Fort Ord.
- Division 2: Sand City, Del Rey Oaks, a small portion of Seaside and the Monterey Peninsula Airport District .
- Division 3: Most of Monterey and some of Monterey County.
- Division 4: Pacific Grove, a small area in New Monterey and a portion of Pebble Beach.
- Division 5: Carmel, a portion of Pebble Beach, Carmel Valley and a portion of the Big Sur coastline.

With the water board's approval, the plan now awaits clearance from the U.S. Justice Department. Supporters of the plan hope federal approval will come before November, so that the first election under the new format will take place before year's end.

The committee recommended Divisions 1 and 2 elect representatives first. Whoever is elected from those wards would replace long-time directors Hekhuis and current chairman Ken Long.

It is well-recognized that, at present, there is a lopsided representation on the board. All five elected members are from either District 4 or 5 of the newly approved plan. Said Director Jim Hughes, a Pacific Grove resident, "If that doesn't say we need this, I don't know what else would."

Two dissenting

Casting dissenting votes were directors Dick Heuer and Fran Farina. "We should keep our regional perspective on this board," argued Heuer.

Farina wasn't especially concerned about the likely drop in population from the closure of Fort Ord, which would undo the balance of the plan, based on the 1990 census.

The water district extends from the Fort Ord-Marina border to the north down to the Carmel Highlands to the south.

For 16 years, candidates for water board have undertaken the imposing challenge of campaigning throughout the entire peninsula. Supporters of the plan say the wards will make life easier for the constituents as well as the candidates.

Said committee member Tom Rowley, "Now, when people have a problem, they will have someone specific to take their complaints to."

Heat turned up on CUSD board after ousters announced

By SCOTT BREARTON

ABOUT FIFTEEN supporters attended a Carmel Unified School District board meeting March 11 on behalf of Bonnie Clark, a teacher at Tularcitos Elementary School, who was one of three district employees terminated effective June 30.

Joel Diamond, a counselor at Carmel High School, and Donna Krapf, who teaches a CHS freshmen English class, were also terminated.

CUSD President Frank Pinney announced the names as he reported action taken by the board in closed session.

In a phone interview March 18, CUSD Assistant Superintendent Rosemary Montgomery said, "The dismissals were not financially motivated. I can't say anything more than that."

"We know that you've acted within the limits of the law," Arthur McLoughlin, chapter services consultant for the California Teachers Association said to the CUSD board, "but this kind of activity does not afford individuals the opportunity to correct deficiencies, or to know what they're being accused of."

"We'd like to ask that you reconsider your decision and reinstate her," McLoughlin said, noting that Clark had received "better than satisfactory evaluations" during her two-year probationary period with the district.

In a phone interview March 12, McLoughlin said that due to the passage of State Senate Bill 813 in 1983, probationary teachers lost their right to due process, thus meaning the board acted within its rights.

"A probationary teacher can now be terminated without ever knowing the reason," McLoughlin said. "Before then, a three-year probationary period existed. Teachers had the right to request a hearing and plead their case. The district was required to notify the teacher the reason for termination."

Under the current system, unless the school board takes action to terminate a probationary employee, the person becomes a permanent district employee after two years, according to McLoughlin.

No justice

He said he found it ironic that Pinney announced the names of the teachers who were terminated directly after reciting the Pledge Of Allegiance. "The last sentence is 'and justice for all.' There was no justice for Bonnie Clark," he said.

"I blame the system that allows this," McLoughlin continued. "It is a system that needs to be overturned."

"I'm real unhappy with this process, in the way it's being conducted," agreed Rudy Sonne, a parent whose son was in Clark's class last year. "There's something very fishy about this (process)."

Herb Beckett, a part-time physical education aide at Tularcitos, said he couldn't imagine why Clark would not be re-hired next year. "I have a lot of admiration for her," he said. "If I had any children, I would want to have them in her class."

Phyllis Thorngate, also a teacher at Tularcitos, was visibly upset at the process. "I would like to speak to the issue of fairness," she said. "We don't give students failing grades without a progress report."

> 'I blame the system that allows this. It is a system that needs to be overturned.'
> —Arthur McLoughlin

When asked why she was being terminated, Clark replied, "I honestly do not know why. I've been racking my brain for nights trying to figure out what I did. I've never had a personality conflict with Principal Karen Camilli.

"I really enjoyed working at Tularcitos. I truly appreciate the support of colleagues, parents and friends. It really means the world to me."

"I don't really want to see this happen to any other probationary teachers," said Clark. "Even though the law allows it, I feel it's inhumane and unethical."

Having worked at Highland School in Seaside for five years (with the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District), Clark said she wanted to be in Carmel because she had planned on her three-year-old daughter attending Tularcitos Elementary.

"I've been planning this for eight years, to try and get a job here," Clark said. "In essence, eight years of my career has gone down the drain.

"There's a slight chance that the board

State Parks OKs lot usage

By SCOTT BREARTON

AFTER A lengthy debate, California State Parks District Superintendent William Fait has agreed to allow the use of a state-owned field for parking at Bay School's annual fund raiser April 17, with the agreement that parents will examine other options next year.

"State Parks is going to allow the use of the Brigg's field for this one additional year," Fait said. "But there is an understanding that the school district will investigate other alternatives that do not involve the use of the property."

Bay School parents had contended that State Parks was denying Bay School the one-day use of Brigg's Meadow, a sparsely vegetated field just north of the school, because of opposition last year to off-highway parking at Monastery Beach.

In a letter sent last year to Bay School, Glen McGowan, supervising ranger at Point Lobos State Reserve, outlined the California State Parks' opposition to using a portion Brigg's Meadow for parking during "Bay Day."

"The 'Briggs Meadow' is now being managed to return to a more natural plant community," McGowan worte. "Mowing the meadow once a year and using it as a parking lot once a year is very detrimental to the natural processes of plant and animal succession.

Parking permits program may be all-or-nothing affair

other words, no one would know which cars belonged to whom? It would be hard to write tickets.

"It wouldn't work," explained Williams, chairman of the ad hoc parking committee. "You need everybody."

Williams spoke to The Pine Cone after the Carmel Planning Commission met Wednesday, March 10 to discuss the plan and begin building consensus.

As one of the architects of the plan, Williams hopes the whole thing will stay intact.

"I can't say how my fellow commissioners are going to vote," said Chairman Jack Kennedy. "I personally think it's a good plan."

The full parking report contains survey information, an evaluation of the problem and "a catalogue of solutions."

Kennedy admitted there was some confusion in the air at the March 10 meeting, and commissioners cast some of contradictory votes. "I think we discovered that it was a difficult subject, and we did in one meeting what it took a committee three years to do," he said.

Williams, nevertheless, was pleased with the meeting. "To me, it was a very positive. They did their homework. And I believe this report has stood the test of time."

Some confusion surrounded whether the permit program would actually be policed, or whether it would be voluntary. Key sources suggest the program must be enforced if it is to mean anything. The document, however, does not address enforcement policies.

"Yes, you will get tickets, just like with anything else," Williams predicted.

"You need to have enforcement," echoed Kennedy.

A majority on the commission agreed employees should not have to buy permits, but should be entitled to them.

Yet there is an argument to be made in favor of selling the permits. After all, even a modest monthly or quarterly fee imposed on downtown employees would serve as an incentive to carpool. It should be remembered that ride-sharing is an important ingrediant in the overall solution, according to the report.

The money raised from selling permits could also go to bus passes or free parking opportunities for carpoolers, according to Williams.

More complications

The plan allows neighborhoods to, in effect, elect themselves into the permit program. Some neighborhoods may not wish to bother, or may feel they do not have much of a problem.

If so, their streets, which do not require permits for parking, could become free-for-all areas. The neighbors may end up deciding later they are better off requiring permits after all.

"It is like the water finding its own level," said Williams, who believes a voluntary, neighborhood-by-neighborhood program could work. "The residents will be able to decide how much they think they have a problem."

The permit program is designed to be more than a solution; it is intended to serve as a fact-finding endeavor. The later phases of the action plan will step in to address parking supply and trip-reduction strategies.

With the permits, said Williams, "We can inventory to what extent the employees need the R-1 (single-family residential) areas to park."

Commissioner Maggie Hardy agrees. "The permit process allows us to see who is parking where."

It's been said the whole parking plan hinges on the needs and convenience of employee parking. If downtown workers can be accommodated, the rest should fall into place.

About 1,000 employee cars stream into the village each day, according to Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association. And about half of those park on residential streets.

Not only would the development of new parking facilities be well in the future, they would likely not accommodate these 500 vehicles that park in the downtown, even with major trip-reduction programs.

At the meeting, commissioners were intrigued by the concept of building a second level on the Sunset Center parking lot.

The new level would make use of some new technology that reportedly can produce attractive, although temporary, parking facilities. But even the new level at Sunset Center would create only an additional 100 spaces.

In the end, the parking plan works under the assumption that organization, perhaps more than new supply, is the key to solving Carmel's decades-old parking problems. Issuing permits is widely viewed as the place to begin.

CRA to clean beaches on Saturday

THE CARMEL Residents Association will hold a Carmel Beach cleanup Saturday, March 20, at the base of Ocean Avenue.

Carmel residents and other volunteers will meet at 10 a.m. Screening devices and plastic bags will be provided.

The monthly volunteer beach cleanup – now in its fifth month – was initiated due to staff cutbacks during the city's budget squeeze.

Mayor Ken White called the effort "more comprehensive and labor intensive than we could afford, even in the best of times."

Additional information can be obtained by calling Charles Fox, cleanup chairman, at 626-1588.

Carmel Commentary

Zoning ordinance flawed from outset

By Jim Wright

THE CITIZENS of Carmel will vote June 8 on a referendum, the outcome of which could result in a major impact on the commercial district and the quality of life for the residents of our village. The basic question is, "Does Carmel need more tourist shops?"

Despite the objections of many Carmelites, the City Council adopted an ordinance at its Dec. 8, 1992 meeting that rezoned part of the commercial district, and also allowed tourist uses in the zones that had been set aside for shops to serve local needs.

The actual rezoning totaled 17 lots, embracing scores of businesses, extending from Mission west to Lincoln. The Central Commercial Zone line was moved south to Seventh Avenue, allowing landlords to rent to the same types of shops that do business on Ocean Avenue.

Equally important were the portions of the ordinance that made significant changes in the types of businesses allowed in the Service Commercial (SC) District and the Resident Commercial (RC) District. These two districts were created to serve as buffers between the intensive uses allowed in the Central Commercial (CC) District and the residential districts.

The SC zone was set aside for shops and services that serve local needs, e.g. hardware stores, dry cleaners, appliance repair shops, banks, beauty shops, professional offices, etc. Now allowed in that zone are art galleries, vending machines, take out food stores, antique stores, cigar stores, etc.

Changes to encourage increased commercial activity were also made in the RC zone, adjacent to the residential zones. This rezoning would allow new retail uses, including liquor stores, in this zone. Also, restaurants, which previously were not an allowed use in the RC zone, would now be allowed up to a total of eight, and existing restaurants could expand with a use permit.

These sweeping changes were made without benefit of the General Plan review process, and as a result, portions of the ordinance are in direct conflict with General Plan policies intended to reduce the impact of tourism by preserving a predominantly residential village character.

The council action, if left unchallenged, would force out the dwindling number of resident-serving businesses and replace them with more gift shops, art galleries, antique shops, take-out food stores, etc.

Why did the council undertake this wholesale rezoning of the commercial district? Were the citizens of Carmel asking for more tourist shops? No! The council caved in to intense pressure from landlords who wished to make even more profits from their property by renting to tourist shops that can afford higher rents.

The ordinance was presented as a small adjustment in the zone lines affecting only 17 properties. In addition, it was characterized as merely "simplifying" and "streamlining" the application process by eliminating certain standards for approval of permits, standards which were intended to preserve the scale and character of the commercial district.

Supporters of the rezoning repeatedly point out that the Planning Commission "studied" this rezoning for two years. They fail to mention, however, that the commission stubbornly refused to convene a General Plan review committee as requested by the Carmel Residents Association and many others. Such a panel would have examined impacts on traffic, parking, and economic effects of the rezoning. The ordinance that emerged from the commission was fatally flawed as it wasn't subjected to this proper process.

The rezoning ordinance is also described by its supporters as a "compromise." It is clear how landlords and developers benefit from the rezoning; but where is the benefit for our residents? How many residents realize that the Planning Commission study actually characterized resident-serving businesses as an "elusive concept ... obsolete and not relevant" and that a majority of our elected council actually voted to delete "limited service uses that provide for local needs" from the Purpose Statement of the RC District?

Fortunately for Carmel, state law provides a referendum process for citizens to reject bad laws passed by local governments. A group of Carmelites gathered the requisite number of signatures from registered voters in the city to oblige the council to repeal the ordinance or set a date for an election.

At its March 2 meeting, the council voted 3-2 to place the issue on the June 8 ballot; the future of Carmel is now in the hands of the voters.

may reverse its decision. That's what I'm hoping for."

Clark admitted she had informed colleagues and parents of the decision, and invited them to attend the board meeting to speak on her behalf.

"I have no (alternative) plans," she said. "I was too shocked by the news to even think of a different career or job at this point."

In other action

The board heard two suggestions from Drew Teti, Carmel High School's Associated Student Body (ASB) representative.

Teti said the ASB is working on a plan to increase energy efficiency on campus, and proposed that the annual savings could be split between the district and the ASB.

"Is this split negotiable?" asked board member Gary Gray.

"We want to hear back about the (PG&E) bill," added board member Patricia Herro.

Teti also mentioned an ASB proposal to form a "student appeals board," which could appeal disciplinary decisions handed down by administrators. He said the first step will be to talk to CHS Principal Marie Ishida. "We're just brainstorming at this point," Teti said.

ASB President Lance Thompson announced that plans are underway for the 1993 CHS Spring Carnival, to be held Saturday, May 1, at Carmel High. Thompson said five other area schools will operate booths at the annual fund-raising event.

In other action, the board:

• Heard an update from River School staff on activities there. First-grade teacher Elaine Green outlined River School's new Environmental Resource Center, where teachers can check out educational materials related to the environment.

• Received a report from the district's Health Advisory Committee on the Drug, Alcohol and Tobacco Education programs operating within district schools.

Janet Meyer presented an update on the 'Safe Homes' program. According to Meyer, 396 Carmel families have signed a parent pledge, agreeing that parties held in their homes for school-age children will be chaperoned and drug- and alcohol-free.

"The legacy that you guys (the Health Advisory Committee) are carrying is a critical one," said Pinney.

"This (1992) will be the final year that the meadow is available for parking on Bay Day...you can make an alternate plan for Bay Day 1993."

"We hope that they'll come to their senses on this and be realistic," Hillary Lipman said prior to the final decision. "This is our only hope of maintaining the financial help and securing the future of Bay School, which has been part of the community since 1879."

Bay Day, which netted more than $10,000 last year, has been the primary fund raiser for Bay School since 1955, according to Lipman.

Key Hatton Canyon freeway vote due

By PAUL WOLF

THE TRANSPORTATION Agency for Monterey County is expected to vote Wednesday on whether it will support or reject the controversial Hatton Canyon freeway project.

The March 24 meeting, held at the Salinas Community Center, is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. and continue until noon. It will reconvene at 1 p.m and wind up at 3 p.m.

The action of the 17-member agency is liable to prove a decisive moment in the project's success or demise.

"There will be a resolution we will pass to either accept or reject the Hatton Canyon freeway alternative (1-C modified)," said Carmel Councilwoman Barbara Brooks, who is the city's TAMC representative.

"I don't think the freeway alternative can survive without our support," added Brooks, who personally opposes the project "on environmental grounds."

The project is proposed by the California Department of Transportation, which calls 1-C modified the "preferred alternative." If the alternative collapses, it remains up to Caltrans to design the alternative.

The showdown

The meeting Wednesday is expected to continue the showdown between supporters and opponents. The two sides were entangled in lively debate at the public hearing's first installment Feb. 24. As time ran out, TAMC members agreed they can not deliberate until everyone has been heard from.

Before voting, the panel is scheduled to hear an engineer's presentation on the most popular alternative among freeway opponents — namely, the widening of Highway 1 and the creation of an interchange at Carmel Valley Road.

The agency is under pressure to make a decision by next week's meeting. A question remains about whether any portion of the $42 million earmarked for the freeway is transferable to other projects.

At the Feb. 24 meeting, members said they could not answer that question with certainty.

Brooks said it has been difficult to get a clear sense of whether supporters or opponents hold the majority. "I would say, at this point, it could go either way."

John Thodos named to planning commission

"A DRAWING is merely communication without words."

So said John Thodos (pictured above) to the five Carmel City Council members who interviewed him Tuesday in the council chambers, and then unanimously selected him as the new planning commissioner.

One architect will be replacing another, as Thodos will fill the shoes of Brian Congleton, who has stepped down from the seven-person commission.

Following the city's guidelines, council members were pretty much locked into selecting an architect, but they expressed that they were greatly impressed by Thodos' eloquence.

He spoke of the constant tension between the community's ideas of good design and the individual's unique tastes. "Right now," he said, "the planning commission tends to play it safe; it's like a dish of oatmeal. We can end up with a city of oatmeal...We have to be able to give direction without telling people what to do."

Also interviewed was businessman Charles Fox. Mayor Ken White said he will request Fox keep his application on file for an upcoming vacancy on the commission.

Local leaders spur drive to keep DLI off base closure list that the Army has for the use of the (remaining) property includes the DLI.

"Beyond that," she said, "DLI has been a very integral part of the local economy, as well as Fort Ord."

Mrs. Panetta noted that her husband was part of an international language commission 14 years ago, and helped to pass legislation to improve language instruction programs.

"Just before he left Congress, he introduced a plan to consolidate all (military) language training programs to the Presidio," Sylvia Panetta said, indicating that the former 17th District Representative probably helped make the DLI a valuable asset that would be difficult for the Army to part with.

"He cares very much about this district and he always will," Mrs. Panetta said.

Karin Strasser Kauffman, Monterey County Board of Supervisors 5th District Representative, said U.S. Sen. Diane Feinstein called her on the morning of March 12 with the good news. The savings to the local economy is substantial, according to Strasser Kauffman:

- In terms of direct personnel, 5,300 jobs have been spared.
- Indirectly, some 8,500 jobs have been saved.
- Total economic impact of $550 million.

"Without question, the maintenance of the DLI is a tremendous boon to the economy," said Strasser Kauffman, "not to mention the community.

'Senator Feinstein made it clear in her conversation with me that President Clinton really did listen to the arguments and presentations that were made to him and his administration regarding the need to keep the Defense Language Institute operating in Monterey.'

—Karin Strasser Kauffman

"Senator Feinstein made it clear in her conversation with me that President Clinton really did listen to the arguments and presentations that were made to him and his administration regarding the need to keep the Defense Language Institute operating in Monterey."

Strasser Kauffman was in Washington D.C. two weeks ago, meeting with Pentagon officials and a number of representatives from Congress. She said local community leaders set up a special meeting with Base Closure Commission staff to discuss how to best prepare arguments to keep both the Presidio and the Naval Postgraduate School off the base closure list.

"That meeting was most timely," said Strasser Kauffman. "I'm very pleased that I could be part of an incredible team effort by our elected officials, from our city council members up to and including President Clinton himself."

Strasser Kauffman said the local team presented documentation to the fact that the DLI had not only military significance, but economic significance, and that its maintenance here in Monterey is part of the peninsula's planning for the successful reuse of Fort Ord.

While contemplating a solid black canvas, I realized my Birkenstocks were beautiful.

It must be the way they cradle my feet because the only thing aching was my head from trying to figure out what this stuff meant. Next we saw an empty pedestal. My friend called it 'a statement.' For a moment I considered putting my Birkenstocks on it. Now that would be a statement."

Information sought on missing Carmel man his home on High Meadow Drive east of the City of Carmel, according to his wife Alice.

Monterey County Sheriff's Lieutenant Fred Wilson said as many as 20 deputies spent 130 "man-hours" last week searching the hilly terrain surrounding the man's condominium, with the help of volunteers and search dogs.

"According to his wife, we don't feel he could've gotten very far," Wilson said. "We searched the area thoroughly and didn't turn up anything."

"He's a very agreeable person," said Earlene Esch, the DeMoulpied's future daughter-in-law. "If someone was to offer him a ride, he may have accepted."

Describing him as "very quiet and cooperative," Mrs. DeMoulpied added her husband gets weak when hungry (due to hypoglycemia). She said he speaks mainly in generalities and may not be able to communicate where he lives.

Mrs. DeMoulpied has distributed flyers across town, hoping someone will recognize her husband from the reproduced photo.

Balding with gray hair and blue eyes, DeMoulpied is about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs about 135 pounds, according to Mrs. DeMoulpied. He was last seen wearing a light gray sweater, dark gray pants and dark-rimmed glasses. DeMoulpied was also wearing a Medic-Alert bracelet, which was inscribed with his name, address and phone number.

Anyone with information regarding the whereabouts of DeMoulpied is asked to call the sheriff's department at 647-7911, or Mrs. DeMoulpied at 624-0214.

The mayor's courage

Dear Editor:

Mayor Ken White's deciding vote to "direct zoning ordinance to June ballot" (Carmel Pine Cone headline of March 4, 1993) at the Carmel City Council meeting on March 2 showed his independence and courage in the face of strong political pressures.

All Carmelites should be proud of Mayor White and will support his action accordingly at the polls on June 8!

Carmel getting "mall-ed"

Dear Editor:

When Mayor White and Councilmen Fischer and Coniglio refused to rescind Ordinance 92-23 which rezoned the commercial district they each made a statement that Ordinance 92-23 was, indeed, a good law. It is my belief that none of these gentlemen, however well-intentioned, read the law, or understood what it would actually do to our commercial districts.

I have been researching the history of this fatally flawed ordinance. It would result in a wholesale rezoning of the commercial district of Carmel, not "just an adjustment to zone lines."

The minutes of a special City council meeting on 20 October 1992 record this motion:

"Following discussion, it was moved by Fischer and seconded by Coniglio, to make no changes (for allowed uses) in the RC district." The motion carried unanimously.

The adopted ordinance makes changes in the RC zone specifically against the instructions of the Council to not make changes.

It doesn't matter how or why staff failed to adjust the ordinance but it was the Council's responsibility to see that the law fulfilled their instructions.

It is my belief that the Council majority was moving too fast on the issue and did not understand the ordinance as adopted. It is a confusing bag of tricks which deserved a more thorough review, but instead focused on the granting of a special privilege to certain property owners.

I ask the voters of the city to recognize that Ordinance 92-23 doesn't do what the City Council intended it to do. It needs to be rejected by the voters. This would send a message to the Council: "Do your homework. Make sure the laws you pass are consistent with the General Plan and the will of all the people."

Ordinance 92-23 is bad law. Say "yes" to Carmel. Vote "NO" to rezoning on June 3. Stop the MALL-ing of Carmel.

The traffic monster

Dear Editor:

I hope that you will print this Hatton Canyon letter promptly.

Have you ever considered how many tourists come to our Peninsula each year? Consider each night a tourist spends in bed on the Peninsula as a "tourist night." Three years ago, there were 1,300,000 tourist nights spent on the Peninsula. Does this possibly suggest one of the major causes for gridlock, especially since the driving tourists often drive 15 to 20 miles per hour — and rubberneck incessantly?

In addition to the enormous quantity of carcinogenic pollutants generated by the slow moving and standing cars of locals and tourists, there is a staggering waste of fuel due to either gridlock in some cases or the long slow parking lots that so many of our streets have become.

Forty nine thousand (49,000) acres of free space in this area indicate that both government and the electorate are very sensitive to and protective of our precious, incredibly beautiful environment. If we do not erect the freeway with state and federal monies, one will be erected in another county with those monies, and we will be left to stew in our congested traffic juices. The Hatton Canyon throughway (2.8 miles is not a freeway) will partially alleviate the incredible congestion brought on by development of homes, restaurants and lodging facilities, which various Boards of Supervisors encouraged, fostered and legally adopted — they owe it to you to get the traffic monster off your back. Write and phone your Supervisor and Council members to vote for the only honest solution — a 2.8 mile bypass.

Cole Lester
Carmel

Freeway for our future

Dear Editor:

For several hours each day during much of the year, those who live or work in the Lower Carmel Valley, in Carmel Meadows or Carmel Highlands or in the Big Sur are virtually cut off from the world by a traffic gridlock on Highway One.

Caltrans has determined that the most effective solution to the problem is a road through the Hatton Canyon. The alternative, to widen the existing highway with an underpass at Carmel Valley Road, would be costly, require the condemnation of private property, and provide relief for only a few short years. By the time of completion, gridlock would likely prevail again. Because it wouldn't provide real relief, Caltrans officials will not proceed with the alternate project. Nor should they.

The state owns the necessary right of way. Federal and state funding is available. We have but to go forward with the process. If environmental impacts in the Hatton Canyon cannot be adequately mitigated, the necessary permits will simply not issue and the project will die. If

A reasonable 'alternative'

Dear Editor:

When the Transportation Agency of Monterey County meets on 24 March to vote on the Hatton Canyon Freeway, its members must consider the needs of the local citizens they represent and not accede to pressure from Caltrans, the mission of which is to build freeways for through traffic.

We, the people of Monterey County, need a solution to one simple problem: the congestion at Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road. That solution is Alternative 4-1A (or 4-1B), providing for widening Highway 1 to four lanes and constructing an underpass to Carmel Valley Road. It is logical, cost-effective and least environmentally damaging.

The proposed L.A. style freeway would not only ruin the beautiful Hatton Canyon and erect ugly berms and overpasses, it would primarily benefit only 17 percent of the traffic (the through traffic). The remaining 83 percent (the local traffic) would be delayed and inconvenienced by a complicated urban signalization system under the freeway at Carmel Valley Road. Also, it would increase the local traffic problems on Carmel Rancho Boulevard and Rio Road.

Alternative 4-1A would virtually eliminate the long backups on Highway 1 south of Rio Road. Casual observation confirms that even when the Rio Road light is green, cars continue to crawl at a snail's pace until beyond the bottleneck at Carmel Valley Road. The new signals there will not help. Common sense dictates that with another northbound lane and free flow at Carmel Valley Road, traffic will be at the speed limit immediately, and the backup will disappear.

Don't be fooled

Dear Editor:

Drive up Robinson Canyon Road. Notice the once beautiful redwood trees, 6.5 mile marker. Look closer, they're dead! Has their life blood water been lost?

Come out on top. What a beautiful view! See the Ventana Wilderness area with Mount Carmel and Chew's Ridge on the skyline, Moore's Lake, its wildlife, and the pristine Garzas Creek tumbling beneath the bridge. Observe the meadows, the endangered Valley oaks, and the carpets of spring wildflowers. See more redwoods, look how healthy they are! They still have water.

Look again. Visualize the 150-unit hotel, gas station, service center with stores, 50 employee houses, equestrian center on the west. Imagine those rolling hills to the east with huge estate mansions. Where's the wild game? Are they on the golf course which drains into San Clemente Creek? Where are the eagles? Their feed has been poisoned to protect that golf course. Look, a mountain lion! No, just another house pet stalking the last quail.

They are "beautiful people," and they have a "wonderful plan," but I don't buy the proposed Rancho San Carlos development. A density of one unit per 40 acres sounds fine on a 20,000 acre ranch, but beware only about 2,000 acres are buildable. Dedicating 80 percent of the unbuildable to a preserve sounds generous, but who gets the tax break?

Other historic ranches in the area are zoned one in 160 acres, but they get one in 40? That's 400 percent above normal! Save the beauty of this area! Don't be fooled by the "Emperor's New Clothes."

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to Bill Melendez's accusations that the Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR) is a "racist group of people" as reported in the Pine Cone last month.

Bill Melendez, past state director of League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), has argued forcefully for for a day-worker center in Carmel Valley for undocumented aliens. According to him any group who opposes his views is a "racist group of people" and that they are "anti-immigrant." By his definition, however, a majority of Hispanic Americans must be racists also because they support limits on immigration. To give you but one example: the 1990 Roper poll found that 74 percent of Hispanics opposed increased immigration. Most Hispanic citizens support steps to control illegal immigration.

All Americans are better served by open discussion of the issues rather than being intimidated by accusations of racism from the immigration expansionists. Ed Levy, professor at Yeshiva University in New York, said the motives of many hurlers of the racial epithets are themselves patently racist. Peter Skerry of the Brookings Institution said there is something "perverse about a country or society many of whose citizens seem to think it is racist when some Americans simply want to restrict or control such a large and historically important influx of immigrants."

As most residents of Carmel Valley already know your charming community has already been carved in half due to the recent redistricting victory by LULAC! If a day-worker center is constructed it will be a magnet for undocumented workers. If you care what is happening to your community, make your feelings heard at the next Town Hall meeting.

If there's one thing we need if our democracy is to succeed it's representation in Washington that is not controlled by special interests, which spent over $1 billion electing the present Congress.

Such a candidate is Bill Monning; he is accepting not one dollar of PAC money.

Bill is exceptionally qualified for a position of national leadership. His experience includes executive director of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, leadership in advocating political reform in Sacramento and Wash-

Wherefore the whisper?

Dear Editor:

I am a visitor to the beautiful Carmel area and while vacationing here I needed to utilize your Carmel library to do some reference work on Cuba.

I found the library a buzzing den of chit-chat — not the quiet haven that libraries are supposed to be — or is Carmel's blah-blah-blah immune?

May I suggest a library branch at Point Lobos? Perhaps there would be could read and have quiet. Or couldn't folks show a bit more respect, please.

What happened to the whisper?

An irresponsible plan

Dear Editor:

Here it is, short and sweet...

Freeze spending; stop waste; eliminate fraud; make cuts in unnecessary spending; then and only then consider raising taxes.

Stop thinking of the American people as having deep pockets!

To ask us to sacrifice more while the money continues to run through the government like a sieve, is totally irresponsible!

I vote NO on Clinton's economic plan.

A treasure lost

Dear Editor:

We have been visiting Carmel since 1949 when we spent our wedding night at the La Playa. What an enchanting getaway this was for so many years. Now, today, here again, after a few year's absence, I feel I have lost a treasured place to visit and shop. I walked around downtown and it's just too much. Too many shops, too many unoriginal art galleries, too much downtown! Who needs all these shops? The T-shirt shops must go!

Don't you think it's best to choose quality shops over quantity schlock?

New city administrator gears up for challenges

Ironically, Carmel's budget-makers have eaten into reserves to equalize revenues and expenditures. Kersnar said he knows little about Carmel's specific financial difficulties or the downsizing of personnel that took place for the first time this fiscal year. But he has entered a period of intense learning.

"In the first several weeks I plan to do a lot of listening," he said. "I will spend a lot of time with Greg (D'Ambrosio, assistant city administrator), with the department heads and with council members."

Kersnar, 43, is taking over from D'Ambrosio, who has been acting city administrator for the past year, ever since Doug Schmitz left Carmel to take a city manager's job in Lake Oswego, Ore.

Kersnar, who will earn $75,000 a year plus benefits, was picked from among more than 200 applications. He begins his new job April 5.

Interviewed by three members of the press after the announcement of his selection was made Tuesday, March 16, Kersnar displayed an easy-going, candid manner — and even underscored the importance of good media relations.

He noted he was a stickler for one point of integrity: the press will not receive any information about his recommendations before the city council does.

Born in San Francisco, Kersnar fondly recalls Carmel as a family vacation spot. Before his post in Cathedral City, Kersnar was senior consultant with Ralph Andersen & Associates, a municipal management consulting firm.

Carmel, of course, is a destination, as well as being a unique hometown. Carmel has a stable population, unlike Cathedral City, a bedroom community whose businesses serve a great number of Palm Springs employees.

Looking ahead to new challenges, Kersnar spoke freely about his philosophy of city management. "I am very much opposed to the notion that the city manager is the sixth council member," he said. "The council has the elected officers, and I respect their role. You have to remember the council members are the experts on the desires of the community."

MEMBERS OF Rancho San Carlos Watch plan a petition strategy to oppose the Monterey County Planning Commission's recommended land-use designation. (Susan Beck photo)

Opposition to Rancho San Carlos gains momentum

By SUSAN BECK

THE FIRST formally organized opposition meeting against the proposed development of Rancho San Carlos attracted proponents and fence sitters as well.

Dr. Ralph Retherford, a member of Rancho San Carlos Watch, cautioned audience members who jammed into the meeting room Saturday night at the Mid Valley Fire Department that the group was not interested in an open debate or lobbying for the proposed project.

Geologist Robert Greenwood said he has kept up with the proposed Rancho San Carlos project since the beginning.

"The planning commission approval was done in the wrong way," said Greenwood.

He added that the Monterey County Planning Commission's job was to recommend zoning for Rancho San Carlos rather than consider any proposed project.

"The hotel never should have been in the recommendation at all," said Greenwood. "Land-use is independent of any project."

He also pointed out the draft Environmental Impact Report (EIR) on Rancho San Carlos found that one unit for 160 acres would be environmentally superior.

Land-use designation

On Feb. 10 the planning commission recommended a land-use designation of one unit per 40 acres for the entire 19,927-acre ranch, which includes 76 parcels from the Carmel Valley Master Plan area. The designation would accommodate 300 homes, 50 employee units and a 150-room hotel. The planning commission recommended a land-use designation of one unit per 40 acres for the entire 19,927-acre ranch, which includes 76 parcels from the Carmel Valley Master Plan area. The designation would accommodate 300 homes, 50 employee units and a 150-room hotel.

Greenwood said the appropriate procedure for the county is to first decide on environmentally satisfactory zoning for the portion of the ranch in the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan. Then, he said, it should have considered transferring part of the Carmel Valley Master Plan parcels within the ranch's boundary for incorporation into the peninsula area plan, and, lastly, considered a project for the entire ranch.

As it is, he said, "We and the county are jumping the gun."

Park district

Gary Tate, representing the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, said the district supports the draft EIR's recommendation of one unit per 160 acres at Rancho San Carlos.

The district's Garland Park in Carmel Valley has a seven-mile common boundary to the ranch, said Tate.

He noted the planning commission's decision to allow one unit for 40-acre parcels would expand the areas where units could be placed.

"Some of the locations are adjacent to Garland Park and Long Ridge," said Tate. "This could potentially cause visual, noise and wildlife impacts to the park."

Another skeptic of Rancho San Carlos' future, Darby Worth, said, "Cutting trees to save the forest doesn't make sense. I know the county is looking at all that money Ranch San Carlos would be bringing in. But, it's just one more thing to split the rich from the poor. And, it will drive all our young people out."

Sharon Bacon agreed. Her family has lived in Carmel Valley since 1917, and she said she has watched the area disintegrate during the past 30 years.

"I have a black heart towards Rancho San Carlos. Another playground for the rich is not needed," said Bacon.

One of the founders of Rancho San Carlos Watch, Don Gruber, took exception to any development at all.

"The best thing," he said, "would be to tear down all the existing buildings on the ranch, and have the property go back to nature."

Attorney Zan Henson said he is unconvinced the traffic from the ranch's proposed development would not greatly impact San Carlos Road onto Carmel Valley Road.

For example, he cited the already approved Quail Meadows sub-division and hotel project that also uses San Carlos Road.

Perhaps people were not concerned about Rancho San Carlos, Henson observed, because it is one ridge away from Carmel Valley.

"If it were in the valley," said Henson, "the room would be twice as full."

'Another playgound for the rich is not needed.'

As it was, more than 50 people were in attendance, including Tom Gray, a managing partner of Rancho San Carlos.

After the meeting Gray said the residents' concerns over water and traffic did not surprise him.

"There is always opposition," he said, "but, quite often the concerns of the opposition are the same as the supporters."

He added that the planning commission's recommendation spoke to those concerns and set up a strict water policy: Rancho San Carlos can neither take water that goes to Carmel River, nor can it increase the congestion on any state and county highways.

For the last three years, Gray has been involved with the development project, and has observed that as people learn more about the process and the hopes for

Guest report

Why don't we have more women judges, and what can we do about it?

By ANNE MCGOWEN

ABOUT 16 percent of the judges in California are women.

The percentage is even smaller on the Supreme Court, the appellate courts, and in smaller counties such as Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties.

We know some of the more famous: Rose Bird, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, appointed by Governor Jerry Brown, and unseated later by voters who believed she was too soft on crime. And, Justice Joyce Kennard on the California Supreme Court, but so low-key that even former Governor Jerry Brown didn't recognize her when they happened to be seated near each other on a recent plane ride.

In Monterey County, we know our one woman on the bench, Judge Wendy Duffy who sits in Municipal Court. Santa Cruz County also has one woman, Judge Heather Morse. But there are at least five rural and smaller counties, with vacancies, and no woman currently sitting on the bench.

First question

The first — and easiest — question to ask is why? Often it is only the woman who is a party in a court action, or only the woman lawyer who will be able to understand the difference in communicating with another woman instead of the usual male judge. I found this out the first time I appeared before a woman judge, and began to understand for the first time why men lawyers always seemed more at ease in court. How much more impact when you are a woman trying to explain why you can't make it on the sporadic child support payments your ex is paying?

But women being able to talk to women is not the main reason for having more women on the bench. We need more women on the bench because we need a woman's perspective on issues that specially affect women, such as child custody and support, sexual harassment, and employment discrimination. We also need a woman's perspective on other basic legal issues affecting our society, such as how to deal with violence, and poverty.

My own perspective on why there are so few women judges comes from the year I spent a year as President of California Women Lawyers (CWL). A statewide independent organization involved in the legal issues affecting women lawyers and women in general, CWL has worked constantly since its incorporation in 1974 toward getting more women are appointed to the bench.

The organization conducts its own judicial evaluations, meets regularly in Sacramento with the governor's Appointments Secretary (currently Chuck Poochigian), and keeps tabs on the governor's track record in appointing women.

CWL's credibility with the governor's office in evaluating judicial applicants ranks second (if that) only to the State Bar's JNE Commission (officially the Judicial Nominees Evaluation Commission, but referred to more commonly as the "Jennie" Commission).

Peer review

The CWL evaluation process is open to all judicial applicants (except those belonging to discriminatory private clubs), both male and female, who request such review, and includes a confidential peer review of the applicant's knowledge of the law, experience and temperament. CWL forwards the results and the rating of each applicant to the governor, and meets regularly with the Appointments Secretary to go over the results of their evaluations.

CWL found that Governor Wilson was phenomenal in his first year appointments, naming women to fill 40 percent of the vacancies. His latest round of appointments is not keeping up with his early track record, however, and CWL has been constantly reminding him of the continuing need for diversity.

So why do I believe there are so few woman judges? It is not just because women make up only 26 percent of the lawyers in California. During my year as a president, I traveled around the state to visit with our women lawyer affiliates. Inevitably, the discussion came around to the judicial appointment process. I was surprised to find that one of the main reasons there are so few applications for judicial appointments is that many women lawyers are still skeptical about trying to break into the "old boys" network — a system which they believe, still controls the judicial appointments process.

Without discounting entirely any foundation for this belief, it is also true that the governor is aware of the need for diversity on the bench — not just more women, but minorities as well.

The problem is the paucity of applications from those who are not white males. I have always maintained, and still do, that if 50 percent of the applicants are women, then the governor will be hard pressed, looking at two vacancies, not to fill at least one with a woman .

It is a political reality, however, and Mr. Poochigian will point out, that the governor is looking to appoint those applicants who agree with his philosophy. And while he also quick to add that does not necessarily mean party affiliation, it is telling that only Republican applicants have received appointments so far. And also the fact that the "law and order" D.A. 's office has been a fertile ground for judicial appointments.

So, what does all this mean in the move to get more women on the bench? If it's true that the governor is only going to appoint Republican D.A. 's then it makes sense to encourage them to apply. But in the current environment it also means that more women should apply, regardless of their party affiliation or job. Women must let the governor know that their ranks include many women qualified for a judicial position, and the only way this can be demonstrated is by women applying for the positions.

the ranch, they become supporters.

"I have great love for the ranch," said Gray, "I want to see right by it."

The meeting was conducted by Rancho San Carlos Watch to plan strategies for circulating a petition, which specifically urges the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to vote against the proposed 150-room hotel and golf course at its March 30 hearing.

The petition states that the Carmel River watershed will not support this type of commercial development. And, the amount of traffic generated by hotel guests, staff, and service personnel would significantly increase the traffic problems along Carmel Valley Road.

Health advisory board seeks new members

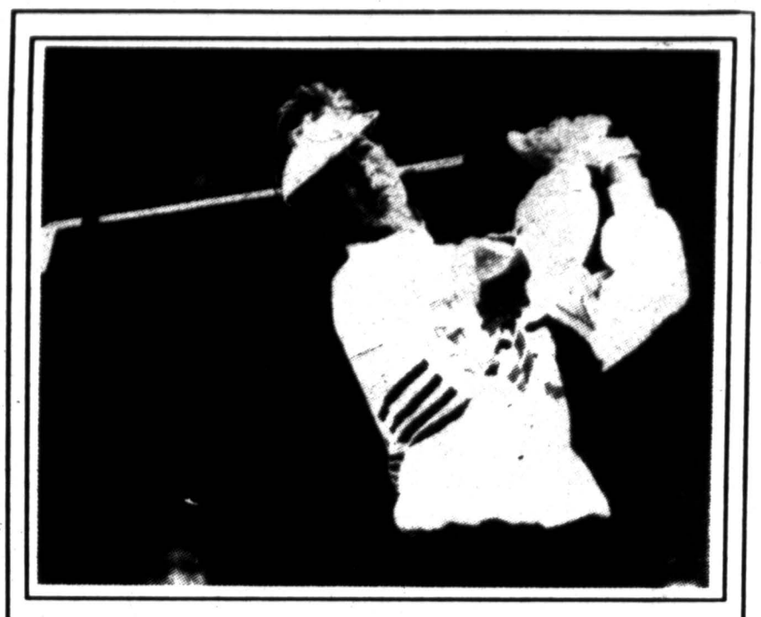
FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman is seeking individuals interested in serving on the Monterey County Mental Health Advisory Board.

The 5th district includes the Aguajito, Skyline Forest, Pebble Beach, Carmel, Carmel Valley, Big Sur, Pacific Grove and most of Monterey.

The main function of the Mental Health Advisory Board is to review and evaluate the community's mental health needs, services, facilities and special programs.

The board meets monthly on the last Wednesday of each month.

Anyone interested in serving and resides in the 5th district is required to send a letter stating their desire to serve, including home address and daytime phone number to the officer of Supervisor Strasser Kauffman, 1200 Aguajito Road, Suite 001, Monterey, 93940.



Understanding Golf

By JANET COLES

SHORT GAME improvement is vital to break the scoring barrier of 100 or even 90.

The ability to strike the ball somewhat straight and consistently is obviously important in golf. However, from what I have seen playing in Pro-Am's, there are three areas in particular where even slight short-game improvement would bring many amateurs immediately into the 90s or even the 80s.

1) Bunker Play: The reason many players so frequently fail to get out is that simply being in the sand paralyzes them with fear. A one hour practice session of just dropping the club through the sand under the ball would conquer that fear forever.

2) Chipping: Learning that rolling the ball from just off the green is always easier to execute and judge than flying the ball. Trying to loft the ball rather than run the ball is a standard mistake among higher handicappers.

3) Long Putts: Learning to control distance on long putts is critical in eliminating three putts. A long putt practice session once a week focusing on getting distance control and learning how to get the ball close to the hole will lower your score immediately. On long putts distance is always more important than direction.

(Editor's note: Janet Coles is a member of the Ladies Professional Golf Association and toured 14 seasons, winning four tour events. She retired as a top 30 all-time leading money winner. Coles teaches golf at Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley and can be reached at 624-0111.)

Carmel Youth Baseball

By Pat Little

Opening day on the way

THAT BLIZZARD may have been enough to give the groundhog cause to reconsider its prediction about when spring will arrive on the east coast, but fortunately we do not have to rely on groundhogs to know that spring is already stirring in Carmel. Out here, we can tell that spring is in the air when hundreds of locals, young and old, start getting ready to make their annual trek to Larson field next to the mission on Rio Road to observe their favorite rite of the season: opening day for youth baseball.

This year the date is Saturday, March 27 (rain date Saturday, April 3), according to Carmel Youth Baseball president Mark Boitano, starting with the traditional pancake breakfast from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Those of you who remember the long, slow-moving lines last year will be happy to hear that "express" service will be offered this time, with five grills operating instead of two. Womanning the grills again will be Katy Curry of the Wagon Wheel Restaurant and her crew of volunteers. They put together great food on behalf of CYB at $5 for adults and $3 for children. After breakfast, a mystery guest will deliver the first pitches. Last year our own Clint Eastwood made our day with his performance on the mound.

Prior to opening day, Ginny Fogg will conduct a clinic for scorekeepers on Wednesday, March 24 at 7 p.m. in room L3 at the Carmel Middle School. Team parents, who have been selling breakfast tickets are asked to turn in their tickets and proceeds to the Treadmill Jr. Sports Boutique at the Crossroads Shopping Center on Monday, March 22. Incidentally, the Treadmill Jr. has a discount on baseball shoes and socks, and contributes a portion of each sale to CYB. LOCAL ALLSTATE AGENTS HONORED

Three local agents were honored for their sales achievement in 1992, according to Allstate Insurance Company Regional Vice President John Blakeley. Gary Stuffelbeam and Danny Feldman of Monterey received Honor Ring awards for their accomplishments while Howard Fosler of Carmel was cited as top agent in the three county Central California area. Fosler will be attending Disney World in Florida for further recognition in May at Allstate's national convention.

COLDWELL BANKER STAGES ITS LARGEST SPRING OPEN HOUSE

Now through April 4, Coldwell Banker will have approximately 120 homes open for potential buyers to preview on the Monterey Peninsula, says Ruth Krumin, manager of the Coldwell Banker Carmel office.

This annual Spring Open House Celebration represents the largest open house event in the history of the company, with tens of thousands of homes in North America open for weekend viewing this spring.

"Home prices are more affordable, inventory is good and interest rates are low, so it's an opportune time to buy a home," says Krumin. "Our annual Spring Open House Celebration is an effective way for us to bring home buyers and sellers together."

Coldwell Banker, Carmel, is located at 26611 Carmel Center Place. For information, call 625-3300.

MARCHES FORM CARMEL PUBLISHING COMPANY

Ray and Barbara March of Carmel Valley, publishers of Buying The Best magazine, have announced the formation of Carmel Publishing Company.

Under the auspices of the new publishing firm, the Marches intend to expand their magazine interests into other California regions as well as on the Monterey Peninsula.

Buying The Best, the oldest four-color magazine of its kind on the Monterey Peninsula, is currently published annually and distributed locally and to targeted audiences in Northern and Southern California.

"We're extremely pleased with the response we've had to Buying The Best," Barbara March said. "The magazine has grown 30 percent in the last year and we think that is a great vote of confidence."

THE ANNUAL Salvation Army Luncheon drew a large crowd to the Country Club at Quail Lodge to hear Judd Rose speak. (All photos by Chris Hulse)

Just pure fun

I AM pleased to be receiving notices of your fund-raising and fun-raising events. Keep them coming. Thank you too for your column input.

PLEASE keep sending word by mail, fax or carrier pigeon, as I don't keep a desk at the newspaper and am unlikely to answer a phone message unless it is an emergency and is accompanied by a complete message. Also, I need two weeks notice for invitations.

Here are some of the best pickings from the swirl of soirees last week. A girl can only schmooze so much ...

With military precision, the Salvation Army Monterey Peninsula Corps carried off their annual luncheon on March 13 at Quail Lodge.

They carried out introductions, music from the Pacific Grove High School Jazz Ensemble, guest speaker and ABC news correspondent Judd Rose, luncheon and installation awards and ended exactly at 2 p.m. as scheduled.

But that's where all decorum stopped.

Lt. Ed Loomis is a regular stand up comedian and he kept the huge crowd in stitches. He suggested this article open with, "Small band of youth from PG High hold audience captive at Salvation Army luncheon."

And he went on to warn the audience that the kids were good, free and loud. After a few blasts from the horn section we believed him.

He reminded us that these kids could be burglarizing our homes. Instead, they volunteered their time to play at the luncheon. They were promply excused after a short performance so they could return to school.

And the punch lines kept rolling when Rose came to the podium. But, first, Reg Henry, editor of The Monterey County Herald, was introduced. Loomis said he is preparing for the upcoming Big Sur Marathon and delivers every single newspaper by foot. To which Henry replied, "If you don't get your paper, please don't call me."

After announcing that Rose was just back from Brazil and on his way to Paris, Henry said, "Me, I'm going to Salinas next week."

Rose said it was his mother-in-law Ione Strum, publicist for the Salvation Army, who convinced him he should talk at the luncheon. But he warned us that the mayor of Atlantic City walked out on him and Warren Beatty got mad once and gave him a shot in the ribs. A con man had thrown wine in his face too.

While Loomis had revealed his mother made him join the Salvation Army at age seven, Rose said at age 10 he used to stand in front of his mirror mimicking major network news correspondents.

His talk was intially a re-cap of the major investigative reporting he had done on the public's impression of TV journalism. He slammed Geraldo with "sleazy" and "tricks," and said he was amazed that smart people watch such shows.

He mentioned drama versus enlightenment and said what's compelling on the news is "juiced up reality," and anything crying or burning.

He spoke of TV newsmagazines, saying they are a boom market because they are far cheaper to produce than sitcoms, and that 20/20 made $120 million profit for ABC last year.

"We'll hear a lot of hot stories told at a fever pitch and more sloppy, shabby stories," he said.

Of course, he said at Prime Time they are careful to check out all their stories and that each one is passed by a battery of lawyers before it airs.

After he had shocked, titillated, and captivated more than a few guests, he answered questions. Morley Brown, an avid supporter of the Salvation Army, shot her hand into the air and asked him who he'd most like to interview. He said Greta Garbo would have been. However, he prefers interviewing people not so famous.

He was also asked if the station corrects their mistakes. Rose answered, "Yes, generally we make a retraction at the end of the show when everybody's going to the bathroom ..."

The luncheon ended with an encapsulization of the army's programs, from a child development center to scouting and teen image. And, of course, their basic needs programs which offer soup, soap and salvation.

Lt. Colonel Bruce Harvey then astounded the audience with his trumpet.

And Loomis ended the program by asking the audience to stand up if they were army volunteers. By the time he'd asked if anyone had ever rung a bell, or donated clothing, food or money, nearly everyone in the room was standing ...

Men wanted

Seventeen modest men made the Fifth Annual Hospice Ball happen for 230 people on Saturday night at The Inn at Spanish Bay. In all likelihood, they wouldn't want their names published. But Vondra Bancroft, who consulted with the committee (and let me tell you worked her fingers to the bone too) told me they deserve credit. They are: Jack Adams, Charlie Bancroft, Verle Bogue, Trey Busch, Ron Frieberg, Jim Gattis, H. James Griggs, Ken Johnson, Tom Klinger, Herb Lister, Dr. Gerry Martin, John McCarthy, Jeff Meeks, Dr. Ted Sectich, Dr. Charlie Snorf, Dr. Gerry Tarsitano, and Dan Tibbitts.

The tables were festooned with delphiniums and pussywillows, and the dance floor was awash in penguin suits and glittering gowns.

There were no speeches. There was no auction. There was just pure fun and dancing until midnite to the big band sounds of The Dorsey Brothers Orchestra.

Bancroft said in years past they had hesitated to serve lamb. But that's what the men wanted this year and that's what was served.

There was a mingling of people from Salinas too, a primary purpose of this ball, since the two hospices merged to become Hospice of the Central Coast.

See SPOTLIGHT page 17

LEADING FIGURES for this year's luncheon at Quail Lodge were Lts. Ed and Joyce Loomis of the Salvation Army and Board President Breck Tostevin.

TIM TISON and Kirstie Wilde shared a pre-meal laugh with ABC correspondent Judd Rose, center, at the Salvation Army Luncheon. Mr. Rose was a guest speaker at the luncheon.

WAITING TO enjoy the Hospice fund raiser at Spanish Bay were John McCarthy of the Bank of Salinas, Paula Downing and husband Sam, who just happens to be CEO of Salinas Memorial Hospital.

HOSPICE BALL committee members Charlie Bancroft and H. James Griggs paused for a photograph during the pre-meal reception for the event at Spanish Bay.

DR. AND MRS. Richard Pirotte, Dr. Charles Snorf and Ron Frieberg were found together at the Hospice Ball reception.

Poetry was the topic Friday evening at Whittaker's Garden and Gift Shop in Carmel, during the Fourth Annual Tor House Benefit.

There were several docents in attendance including Barbara Brooks, who has sung Irish ballads at the Tor House garden parties. After reciting several of Jeffers' poems, she said, "Being a docent is a treat one gives oneself."

She said people like the calm, peaceful environment at Tor House. "There wasn't even electricity there until 1948," she said. "It gives the sense of being in a gentler time."

She said many who visit the home know nothing of Jeffers, but by the time the docents are through with them they want to buy one of Jeffers' books.

As a docent, she has picked up such information as: hawk tower was named thusly because a hawk roosted there when it was being built; and Jeffers owned 16 lots.

We discussed the houses that have gone up and his poem "Carmel Point."

"...This beautiful place defaced with a crop of suburban houses - How beautiful when we first beheld it..."

Amidst the plants, pots and sumptuous hors d'oeuvres, June Oliverio said she loved Tor House because it is just like it was when Jeffers lived there. She chaired the benefit and said the food, provided by docents, "gets better as it goes."

Lee Goodenough, committee member, said the Carmel Association of Realtors undertook the benefit four years ago because their American Home Week, where they would fix up houses and do yard work, became too much of a liability. They had an affection for Tor House and heard it needed help.

"They sort of adopted Tor House," said Dr. John Hicks, new president of the Tor House Foundation.

Jackie Baumann, a docent for four years, said she remembered when she was a child and her dad would drive them by Tor House and say that a recluse lived there. But she learned that he was simply "a quiet man who enjoyed people if he could step back" and let his beloved wife Una socialize.

CONNIE STROUD of Tor House and Edie Karas, Tor House board member, were found chatting with Monterey show celebrity Mike Goodenough at Whittaker's for the annual Tor House reception.

SHERI ABRAMONTE, Vera Ambrosio and Stephen Poohar, Carmel Association of Realtors President, took advantage of the balmy weather as dusk gathered.

SAM KARAS and Mary Gucene shared some fine moments at the annual Tor House reception.

ELAYNE CHAMBERLAIN poured a glass of wine for June Oliverio, Tor House board member and chairperson for the annual reception, hosted by the Carmel Association of Realtors and Whittaker's.

BETSY BROWN, left, and Diane Bower were co-chairs for the Beacon House Art Auction, an annual fund-raising event.

ARTIST ALEX Gonzales and Delia Bradford (with her painting between) chatted with Libby Miller, chairperson for the artists' reception at the LeVett residence in Pebble Beach.

'Pet pharmacies' coming soon

IF A new program being test-marketed is successful, you will soon be able to have your pets' prescriptions filled at the Pet Pharmacy at Kmart stores. This idea is being tried at 225 Kmart stores in seven states and it could lead to 1,600 Pet Pharmacies across the nation.

In addition to over-the-counter animal medicine (including vaccines that can be administered by the pet owner), the pharmacies will fill prescriptions written by a veterinarian. They will also carry products for flea and tick control, worming problems, dental care, eye care, ear care and some shampoos that can usually only be found in a veterinarian's office.

That's nuts!

Here's an interesting bit of information for these environmentally conscious times. A new cat litter is being marketed and it's made from — peanut shells! It's called Nature's 170 and the manufacturer, Bio-Plus, Inc., claims that it is superior to clay litters for two reasons: It offers higher standards of absorption and odor control, and it is completely biodegradable. It can be flushed or disposed of outdoors without discoloring or harming the soil. Where clay-based cat litters take resources out of the environment, Nature's 170 recycles all resources back to the earth. This product decomposes naturally outdoors or when exposed to one-half inch of rain or irrigation. If this sounds like a good idea to you, ask your local pet supply store about Nature's 170.

Snail bait dangers

This time of year, many of us are unknowingly exposing our Best Friends to an extremely dangerous product — snail bait. Whether you choose a granulated or liquid form, you are risking serious, even life-threatening harm to your pets. Excessive drooling, hyperactivity and tremors, especially in the rear legs, are the most frequent indicators of a run-in with this poison and prompt medical attention can be a matter of life or death.

To avoid this danger, pick up those snails yourself in the early morning. Restricting water usage to the bare minimum will help to discourage snails from visiting your garden. If you feel that you must use snail bait, water it into the soil well and keep your pets off the area for at least 10 days.

Nighttime guardian

This poem reminds me of my feline friends and I'm sure it will strike a chord with you, too.

Lightly, lightly
little cat feet walk over me,
letting me know
I am guarded as I sleep.

Softly, softly,
he purrs near my ear,
letting me know
all is well in the night.

Gently, gently,
he touches my cheeks,
letting me know he loves me.
He is the guardian of my night.

— by Vye Emslie Knox

That's all for this week! See you next time.

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles).

DAVID R. HOLLEY, M.D., NAMED PRESIDENT OF CALIFORNIA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Carmel resident David R. Holley, M.D., has been named president of the California Medical Association, the largest state medical association in the nation.

Dr. Holley was elected one year ago by the 450-member House of Delegates during CMA's annual session and served a year as president-elect. He was president of the Monterey County Medical Society in 1978-79. He practices therapeutic radiology at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

Dr. Holley and his wife Cynthia have two daughters and reside in Carmel.

Obituaries

Alice G. Bower

Alice G. Bower, of Pebble Beach, a founding member of several Peninsula health and civic organizations, died March 7 at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula of injuries suffered from a fall at her home. She was 95.

Mrs. Bower was born Dec. 4, 1897, in St. Paul, Minn., and had been a resident of the Monterey Peninsula since 1945.

After attending the University of Minnesota, she graduated from Wellesley College in 1921. She taught physical education at the University of Wisconsin until her marriage to Dr. Richard Bower. While the couple lived in Kansas City, Mo., Mrs. Bower helped institute a yearly Wellesley garden tour there.

Upon moving to California, she became a founding member of the auxiliary of Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and a founder and member of the board of directors of the Visiting Nurse Association of Monterey County. She was an early board member of the Carmel Foundation and was an officer of the Del Monte Forest Property Owners board. She was active for many years at the Casa Abrego Club of Monterey, as well as arranging garden tours for the Wellesley Club.

She is survived by two sons, Richard Jr. and Jim, both of Pebble Beach; a sister, Marion Blodgett of St. Paul, Minn.; two granddaughters and three great-grandchildren. Dr. Bower died in 1955.

A memorial service was held at St. John's Chapel in Monterey. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of cremation.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the Visiting Nurse Association, P.O. Box 2480, Monterey, 93942.

Eleanor Gerard

Eleanor McCammon Gerard, of Carmel, a homemaker, died March 6 at her home in Del Mesa Carmel. She was 83.

Mrs. Gerard was born on Jan. 29, 1910, in Kingston, Ontario, Canada, and had lived in Carmel for 20 years. She was a member of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley.

She is survived by three nieces, Kathleen Hulburd of Saratoga, Eleanor Pritchard of San Mateo, and Margaret Hilpert of Huntington, N.Y.

A memorial service was held at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church. Burial will be at Madronia Cemetery in Saratoga.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the Hospice of the Central Coast, P.O. Box 2480, Monterey, 93942.

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are needed to deliver 250 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 280 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 25 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually a sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to prepare meals at the Meals on Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The agency also serves lunch to about 75 seniors at the facility every day. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization.

Foster care families needed

The Office of Community and Children's Services needs homes willing to share their families with children who need an alternative home—whether it be for six months or the whole year - while family reunification services are offered, or eventually a permanent home. How will changes in MPUSD affect CUSD?

DUE TO the closing of Fort Ord, over 300 Monterey Peninsula Unified School District certificated employees have received drop notices. This raises a question: How will this turn of events affect the Carmel Unified School District?

Many of the teachers who have received drop notices are young, and have been laid off purely by seniority, not because of lack of skill. This gives Carmel the chance to hire some outstanding teachers.

"Carmel is an aging school district," said Seaside High School counselor Patrick Dowd. "This is an opportunity for adding new blood."

Carmel Unified has a somewhat lower pay scale overall, but because these teachers will want to stay in the area, in many cases they will be willing to accept positions. Although last year there were 17 openings in our district, this year there may be as few as two or four.

"We have to make choices on how to spend the money we have," said CUSD Assistant Superintendent Rosemary Montgomery. For the upcoming school year, a major priority will be facilities and spacing needs – especially at the elementary schools. However, "salary really is the biggest part of our budget," Montgomery said.

Carmel will begin looking for personnel to fill the few openings in the next couple of months, and there will surely be many qualified people waiting to apply. "We will certainly open up the pool of applicants," said CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin.

Our district will take part in the Monterey Peninsula Job Fair on March 27th. "We have participated in the past to a limited extent," Baldwin said.

As of now, there is no data to support the fact that there will be any significant impact on our district due to the closing of Fort Ord.

"We don't expect there will be any changes," Baldwin said.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

During the 1980s, the number of Americans 85 or over increased by 38 percent, and the population of those in their late 80s and their 90s continues to grow. In many cases, they depend on care by daughters or sons who are in their 60s, or older. One study found that, of the 31 million Americans over 65, eight million — about one in four — were caring for parents, other relatives or friends. One researcher on aging forecasts that caring for aging dependent parents while one also is occupied with the needs of children and grandchildren "will be the major domestic crisis of the 21st century."

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Quick start for Padre spring sports

FRESH AIR, green grass, and blooming flowers. Kind of makes you think of 90 mph fastballs, dirty track shoes, and tennis balls whizzing by your head. Well, maybe if you're a Padres sports fan.

Yes folks, spring sports are here again, and it looks to be another successful season for everyone involved. Carmel High's ace pitcher Marc Williams is out to impress major league scouts even though he's already signed a letter of intent to attend Stanford University. Cross-Country star, Danielle Wall will be defending her title as the MTAL's 3200 meter champ. The boys tennis team is coming off a successful second place season and, despite losing several important players, the coaching of Dick Channey should keep the Padres competitive. Carmel's golf team should do well under the tutelage of coach Craig Johnston—especially with the talented Todd Hoskins leading the way. In addition, the girls softball team, led by Rebecca Pokzywinski, and boys swim team, headed up by Robert Allaire, should also do well this year.

Baseball

Being the area's dominant baseball team isn't an easy reputation to hold onto, but Carmel has managed to do so year after year. This year doesn't look to be any different. The Padres opened this season with a 3-1-1 non-league record, and they've made in look easy so far. Last week Carmel hit a slump dropping a 5-2 decision to St. Ignatius, and tying San Lorenzo Valley 3-3. The week before, the Padres took care of Aptos behind the strong pitching of Mike Palshaw and Evi Plata. Marc Williams, usually known for his pitching, came through with a solo home run. The Padres also had no problem downing Seaside. Marc Williams struck-out six batters in just two innings, and Mike Palshaw pitched well in relief. The hitting star was Cory Laughterbach, who was 2x3 in both games, and Louie Dillard did a good job behind the plate for the Padres.

Carmel looks good now, but they will get even better as the season progresses. The pitching of Williams is untouchable, and Mike Palshaw looks to have a good season as the teams other main starter. With the help of big hitters Evi Plata, and the brothers Garza, Marc and Justin, the Padres will be the team to beat locally. In addition, speedster Ben Thompson, along with Dean Wilson and Brett Butler, make the Padres a threat on the base paths. Believe it or not, the team has even more talent. Juniors Joey Bernhard, Josh Butte, Chris Hyndman, and Jason Edwards should make a significant contributions, as should seniors Kyle Koontz, Dylan Coleman, and Ranon Masliyah. The Padres have a long season ahead of them, but if they stay healthy it should be a successful one.

Tennis

Carmel's boys tennis team once again embarks upon their yearly quest to beat RLS, and while this is often easier said than done, the Padres should do well this season, even if they don't beat the Pirates. They started off on the right foot winning their first three games, beating Gonzales in the league opener last week 5-2. Two weeks ago, the Padres took care of Harbor 7-0, and Aptos 4-3. The top three Padres, Cooper Scolen, Sevan Zenopian, and Josh Wiener, as well as the number four and five players, Dan Silver and Justin Kopel, have been playing well so far. As the season progresses, these five, along with doubles team leader Cho Prassert, should make the Padres a tough team to beat.

Track

The Carmel High track team looks to have a good season, and if two of their top runners are any indication, they will. Danielle Wall and Andy Cook each took second place in the 3200 meter event at the Los Banos High School Invitational meet two weeks ago, as they prepared for the opening of the new season. Wall, the MTAL champ in this event, hopes to defend her title while Cook hopes to join her as champ. The Padres open the league season this week against York and P.G.. There should be more good things to come from the track team as they move further into the season.

Swimming

The Carmel boys swim team got off to a good start this season beating Hollister last week, 8173, and triumphing two weeks ago with a 101-84 win over Santa Cruz High. Robert and Mike Allaire, along with Kyle Nichols, Steve Bonfant, Micah Lande, and Kent Whede paced the Padres to both wins. Unfortunately for Carmel, Nichols, one of the area's top swimmers, hurt his ankle in a nonswimming related injury, and will be out for at least a week. The boys hope to be as successful as their female counterparts, who won league for the second straight year, and they have a good chance of doing so if Nichols and the rest of the Padres can stay healthy the rest of the way.

Golf

The Padre golf team is off to a good start this season after defeating Seaside, Salinas, and Monterey on their way to a 3-0 pre-league record. Against Monterey, Carmel's golfers averaged a 50 on nine holes, and were led by Todd Hoskins 43. Hoskins, only a sophomore, should lead the team to success if he can get help from promising juniors Alex Vorobiov and Brandon Roberts. In addition, the return of injured three-handicapper Matt Riegel should help the Padres, who will open league this week against P.G.

The Natural History Report

By Craig Hohenberger

Demystifying the myths about bats

BATS ENTANGLED in your hair, pests, vectors of rabies, are a few of the most commonly misconceived myths associated with these very important mammals. Perpetuated by this misinformation, loss of habitats and pesticide use, bat populations have declined nearly 80 percent in the last two decades!

Fossil records reveal bats evolved nearly 50 million years ago, and morphologically have remained much the same since. Today, most scientists agree that bats and primates evolved from a common shrewlike ancestor, and are more closely related to primates than rodents.

Bats are a fascinating group of animals representing approximately 1,000 species worldwide (one-fourth of all mammal species), inhabiting all habitats except that of the extreme deserts and polar regions. Physically, bats range from the diminutive Thailand bumblebee bat, which weighs less than a penny, to the Old World flying foxes which support six-foot wing spans. Here in California, we have documented at least 25 species of bats, of the more than 40 species recorded in the U.S. and Canada.

Not blind

Contrary to many peoples' ideas, bats are not blind. In fact, many have excellent vision. Bats communicate and navigate with high frequency sounds which are much more sophisticated than any comparable human technological facsimile.

With the onset of winter and subsequent decline in insect populations, many of the temperate zone bat species migrate or hibernate. Many species migrate only 300 miles or so, but there are some that annualy travel from as far as northern Canada and Alaska to Mexico.

Socially, bats display a wide variety of complex behaviors which are still being uncovered. Bats, for their size, are the slowest reproducing mammals on earth: they only have one offspring per year, and generally do not give birth until they are two or three years old. Some bats may live more than 30 years. About 70 percent of all bats are insectivorous, with the remaining 30 percent feeding upon fruits, nectar, and a small percentage exhibiting carnivory. Essentially, all U.S. and Canadian bats are estimations on the 20 million free-tailed bats that frequent Bracken Cave in Texas, suggest they consume approximately 250 thousand pounds of insects nightly! Research on mouse-eared bats have shown they can catch up to 600 mosquitos per hour. Bats are the single most important nocturnal insect predators. In the tropics, seed dispersal and plant pollination is often directly related to bats. In fact, we know of least 300 plant species in the Old World that rely solely upon bats for their survival. Seeds dropped by bats can be associated with up to 95 percent of the forests that are regenerated on cleared land. We now know that bats are the most important seed dispersal anim als in both the Old and New World tropics.

Misconceptions

Perhaps one of the strongest misconceptions about bats is that of contracting rabies. Like other mammals, bats can acquire rabies, but with no more propensity than any other creature. Less than a half of one percent of bats contract rabies. This statistic, more than any other, should put this misconception of the associatioon of bats and rabies to rest! Dr. Merlin Tuttle, of Bat Conservation International, has studied and handled thousands of bats over the last 25 years, and has yet to encounter an aggressive bat, nor contract rabies or any other bat-related disease.

The rapid decline of old growth forests in the U.S., Canada, and worldwide due to habitat loss, pesticide use and lack of understanding on bat ecology have facilitated the decline and subsequent demise of many bat populations and species.

The Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary, under the auspices of state and federal biologists, will soon be forming a Monterey County Bat Conservation Organization, which will be devoted to reversing these alarming trends in our bat populations. Our organization will focus upon educating the public via the schools, local classes at the VWS Research and Education Center, and with the Bat Research Program. We envision the initiation of a regular research program incorporating a variety of traps or nets to capture, band, and release bats to closely monitor their population status and to further educate the com munity.

If you are interested in the Bat Conservation Organization, volunteering, or enrolling in classes at the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary Research & Education Center, please contact us soon to ensure a space in these classes. To help continue our research and education programming, we certainly welcome new memberships and support. Thanks!

P.G. MIDDLE SCHOOLERS RECEIVE CERTIFICATES OF APPRECIATION

Sixth graders from Pacific Grove Middle School received certificates of appreciation from Monterey Elks Lodge No. 1285. The ceremony and dinner honored winners of the Elks-sponsored essay contest, "Why We Should Honor Our Flag."

Winners will compete at the district level.

The Chieftains.

Irishmen bring musical skills into spotlight

THEY'RE REGARDED internationally as the best-known exponents of Irish music.

The Chieftains will bring their wealth of traditional tunes to Sunset Center at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 20.

Single tickets to the concert cost $25. Since it's a benefit for Friends of Sunset Foundation, special ducats including a reception afterward are priced at $50 apiece (half tax-deductible). Call at the Sunset Box Office during normal business hours.

The Carmel offering will feature the full ensemble — Kevin Conneff on bodhran, Paddy Moloney (Uileann pipes), Matt Molloy (flute), Martin Fay and Sean Keene (fiddles), Derek Bell (harp) — along with Kelly Anne O'Sullivan. She's the United States National Irish Step Dancing Champion.

The Chieftains have explored that music's range for more than two and a half decades. Yet they remain a part of contemporary culture, winning two Grammys this year and providing the soundtrack of the Tom Cruise film Far and Away.

They've recorded over 20 albums. And they've won an Academy Award for the score to Barry Lyndon.

The Chieftains have opened for The Rolling Stones and recorded concerts with the likes of Van Morrison, Jackson Browne, Elvis Costello, Ricki Lee Jones, James Galway and major symphony orchestras throughout this nation and Europe.

Classical roundup

Organ master ready for date at local church

THE ORGAN Series at Carmel's Church of the Wayfarer picks up again at 8 p.m. Friday, March 19, with William Osborne rendering J.S. Bach's Prelude and Fugue in C Major, S. 547.

Admission to the event is $10 apiece. Reservations: 624-3550.

Osborne has been on the faculty at Denison University in Granville, Ohio, since 1961, serving as Distinguished Professor of Fine Arts as well as university organist and choral director. And he has concertized widely — this country, Germany, Switzerland, The Netherlands, Australia.

He has issued two discs of Victorian American organ music (Orion label) and another recording for Crystal Records. His critical edition of Charles Ives organ works will be published by the Presser Co. under aegis of the Charles Ives Society.

Other composers on Friday night's program include Samuel Scheidt, Mendelssohn, Herbert Howells, William Bolocom, Louis Vierne. A six-foot TV monitor gives all seats a close view of the performer and organ console.

MOZART SOCIETY of California will present Stanford String Quartet at 8 p.m. Friday, March 19, at the Church of Religious Science in Monterey.

The program consists of music by Boccerini and Mozart; general admission tickets cost $10 and will be available at the door.

The quartet: Phillip Levy and Susan Freier (violinists), Bernard Zaslav (viol), Stephen Harrison (cello). The unit has performed throughout Europe and the United States, and is the resident ensemble at Stanford along with Arizona's Sedona Chamber Music Festival.

"Seating is limited," says series spokesperson Victor Critchlow, "and patrons should arrive early for the best places. Free and convenient off-street public parking is available directly opposite the church entrance."

FANS OF Victor Borge will be happy to see an announcement that came this week.

Known for years as the Clown Prince of Piano, Borge will introduce his followers to the newly-renovated King Hall at Monterey's Naval Postgraduate School at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 22.

It will be a benefit for Monterey Bay Symphony. Tickets are available through the Theater Alliance Box Office (655-3200); price range: $16 to $67.

An octogenarian, Borge still does more than 100 concerts worldwide each year. At NPS, he will pay homage to Edvard Grieg on the composer's 150th birth anniversary.

Critic Walter Kerr wrote: "Borge is the idol of all continents remotely civilized."

Doors will open at 7 p.m. Open seating will maintain in each of four sections.

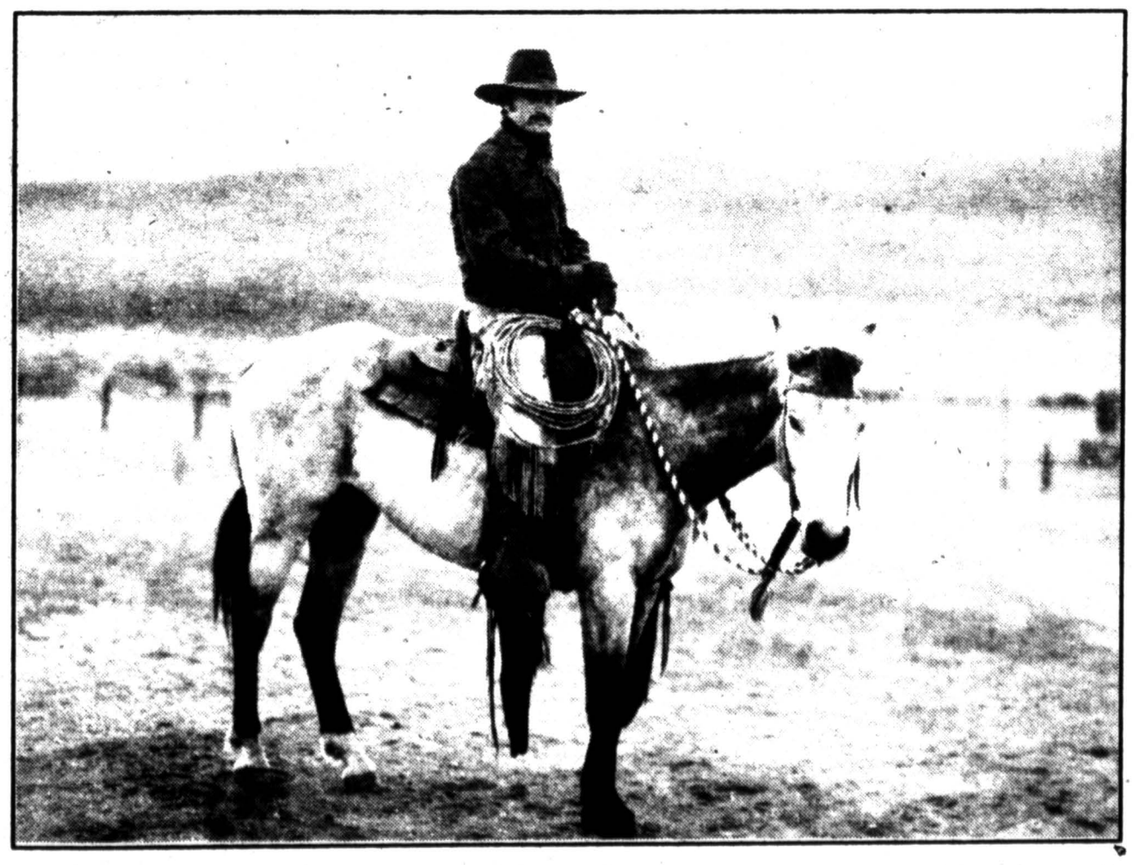
MONTEREY OPERA stands ready to offer The Threepenny Opera by Kurt Weill. Stagings will be at Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum:

• Special preview ($10 per) at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 18. Followed by a meet-the-cast reception.

• At 8 p.m. Friday, March 19, and 3 p.m. Sunday, March 21.

Stephen Tosh conducts while Gina Welch-Hagen is the stage director. The setting: American contemporary. "The characters swirling through the plot are colorful and rich in satire, depicting the disparities between rich and poor."

Tickets are available at Theater Alliance, NPS Box Office, Do Re Mi Music in Carmel Plaza and The Barnyard — $22 (general), $18 students and seniors.



COWBOY PORTRAITS and landscapes by Jay Dusard are on view through April 8 at Center for Photographic Art in the Sunset Complex. Here's Martin Black of Nevada's Stampede Ranch — snapped by Dusard in 1982.

Carmel gallery plans dual exhibit openings

THE SIMIC-New Renaissance Galleries of Carmel (on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth) will have a four-hour champagne reception starting at 5 p.m. Saturday, March 20, to introduce a group figurative show and limited edition lithographs signed and numbered by Andrew Wyeth.

Then, according to venue spokespersons, both presentations will continue through month's end.

Represented in the group exhibit are Kevin Albert, Miriam Briks, Bela Bodo, Zo Ming Ho, Jason, Mark Arian, An He, Guan Ze Ju.

The Wyeth works come from the collection of film producer Joseph Levine.

Arts & Leisure

NEW YORK State folk singers Don Haynie and Sheryl Samuel will perform at Pacific Grove's Portofino Coffee House on Thursday evening, March 18.

Their concert will start at eight o'clock. Door charge: $6 per.

Wrote one critic: "Two excellent voices and a stage full of instruments. Musically strong and lyrically significant."

Another: "Haynie is a fine guitarist and harmonica player, and Samuel a percussionist who gets rhythms out of everything from a bodhran to eucalyptus."

Also, Edward Gerhard and Bill Mize will be spotlighted there at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 20. They're featured on the popular Windham Hill Records Guitar Sampler. Admission: $8.

Gerhard tours extensively, sharing the stage with such as Liz Story, Scott Cossu, Don Henley, Arlo Guthrie. He's at work on his third recording (Virtue Records).

Says one writer: "Mize's touch is magic, and his execution flawless." He's working on his second release.

A PARTY honoring the Moss Landing Jazz Band will happen at Moss Landing Inn and The Whole Enchilada Restaurant on Sunday afternoon, March 21.

The Happy New Year celebration will mark the start of the group's 13th year of performances at the Highway 1 venues. Several guest stars are expected to play with the band from 4:30 p.m. on.

Jim Metcalf, saxist and bandleader, began the run in March, 1980, with J.D.

A Carmel Tradition for Over Three Decades

Looking at the roots of satire

By JOHN DOTSON

FROM THE roots, satire is "saturation," a practice of "sadness," and a satirist is one who is "sated," one who has had enough.

The comedy of satire is irony, and such merrymaking belies despair. So I sense the nature of things in the "philosophical comedy," Jacques and His Master, presented by the MPC Players at Carmel's Cherry Center for the Arts through April 4.

The play is a variation by Czech playwright Milan Kundera (The Unbearable Lightness of Being) based on the 18th century novel, Jacques the Fatalist and His Master, by Denis Diderot, master of the Age of Reason.

Kundera was attracted to revisit Diderot when in 1968 he "experienced in Prague the violent end of Western culture such as it was conceived at the dawn of the modern age, based on the individual and his reasons, on pluralism of thought, and on tolerance." Kundera perceived an obsessive/possessive feeling in the "rational irrationality" of the Russian tanks which provoked in him "an instinctive need to breathe deeply of the spirit of the post-Renaissance West."

Detachment sought

I recognize a reaching for stoic detachment: Jacques le Fataliste. Something here too of the skeptic for whom truth exists only in received contradictions. Classical notions of existence as unrelenting flux warrant consideration in the context of the political disintegration of Eastern Europe, if anywhere.

Kundera turns to enlightenment satire as a vehicle for objectivity, it seems, but there's more going on, and that "objectivity" seems to me appropriately dicey — fidgety — as staged by the MPC Players under the acute direction of Conrad Selvig.

The tensiveness of the characters of Jacques and his Master are deftly drawn by Ron Genauer and Peter Eberhardt. Genauer finesses the Gallic drollery; Eberhardt has the requisite embouchure for the part.

James Brady keenly performs the despicable Chevalier Saint-Ouen, Kevin Hanstick winds his way through four successive masculine personae, playing well each melodramatic moment with Mark Roberts, himself in two guises.

Maleness

This stage is as masculine dominant as it is minimalist and abstract, and the philosophical contemplation of instinct-and-reason becomes strained, the jokes tinny, as Eros is rationalized as "amourous intrigue." I feel a little sorry for the females.

Actors Ivy Cates, Susanne Burns, Barbara Zito and Pat Rutowski bring their characters vivaciously to life despite the insipid attitude that in friendship and betrayal, in cuckoldry and bastardy, men find little "good reason" to respect women.

Maybe that's the point, to question what is liberated and what's not in this double-mirroring of aristocratic and patriarchal sado-masochism and such stuff as modernist theories and postmodernist dreams are made on.

Among the unpromising and centerless circumlocutions, the Master expresses his best hopes for his bastard son, that he will become a carpenter: "He will make multitudes of chairs and multitudes of children and the children will make new chairs and new children who will beget new multitudes of children and chairs."

Jacques responds: "And the world will be cluttered with chairs, and that will be your revenge . . . It's like a merry-go-round . . . And you know what I've been wondering, sir? Whether the one who does all the writing on high hasn't repeated himself an incredible amount and whether he, too, doesn't take us for idiots . . . But good God, sir, don't be so sad . . . I'll tell you the story of how I fell in love . . . The day I lost my virginity."

The Master's summary message is dispersion and disappearance: "Hail, voluptuous rumps! Hail, resplendent moons! You were right, you know. None of us knows where we're going."

But, I realize at last, it is not the words that count, not really, in the sadness. It is the yearning — Jacques for Master, Master for Jacques.

That leaning is what this is all about. It is Desire after all and not the cunning that is in the end both touching and reasonable.

This is good work. Intricate. Formidable. Suggestive.

Irish pianist treats Sunset audience to a display of perfection

By LYN BRONSON

LAST SUNDAY afternoon at Sunset Center in Carmel, just in time for St. Patrick's Day, elegant Irish pianist John O'Conor waltzed into town and played the daylights out of that tried and true warhorse, Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto.

This, his second appearance with the Monterey County Symphony, made an even stronger impression than the first when he played Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 27 in B-flat major two years ago.

There is more than one way to play Beethoven's Third Concerto. I have heard Russian virtuosos exploit it as a display piece and I once heard Vladmir Ashkenazy conducting it from the piano while performing it as an intimate piece of chamber music.

O'Conor's performance combined the best of both worlds. His was a strong, virile performance full of dash and thrills galore, but it also contained many moments of intimate tenderness. It was as perfect and pearly a performance as could be imagined.

Delicious interplay

The development section of the first movement contained beautifully shaped phrases and delicious interplay with the orchestra. O'Conor was never afraid to recede into the background when he was accompanying the orchestra, yet he was always ready to step smartly into the limelight.

The first movement cadenza was a luminous triumph. With bold variations in tempo and infinitesimally graduated changes in tone quality, he made every phrase a part of a larger scheme. There was always a sense of direction, of poise and of eloquence.

O'Conor created a moment of magic in the middle of this cadenza with a descending chain of trills which became softer and softer, and slower and slower, until he introduced with exquisite skill the espressivo melody which followed.

Similarly, the way he played the chain of trills at the end of the cadenza was a revelation of artistic control and musicianship of the highest order which perfectly established the mood of the coda which followed.

Spiritual calm

O'Conor brought to the slow movement a profound feeling of spiritual calm and serenity. Once more his deft shaping of phrases made his playing seem utterly natural. The third movement was a virtuoso tour de force, never bangy, but always fleet, and it moved with dramatic inevitability toward its Presto coda. Never were any passages played for show. The virtuosity, and there was plenty, all stemmed quite naturally from the music itself.

To hear O'Conor play with such exquisite, natural musicianship and feeling reaffirms our faith in piano playing in a world where so many young (and some older) pianists have convinced themselves that the public is immune to anything but fast, slapdash playing. From his fingertips to his toes, John O'Conor is the real thing — a first-class musician and a first-class pianist.

The Monterey County Symphony filled out the rest of the all-Beethoven program with the Egmont Overture and the Seventh Symphony.

Clark Suttle began with a rather deliberate tempo for the Egmont Overture which gave it a weightier effect than we sometimes hear, but with excellent effect. The Seventh Symphony emerged as a satisfying conclusion to the program.

The second movement with its bittersweet variations went well, and the final movement, a challenge for any orchestra, proceeded from beginning to end with a bold exuberance that really got the adrenaline flowing. It isn't easy to present an all-Beethoven program with music that is so familiar to the listeners, but the presence of the distinguished pianist John O'Conor raised the program from the familiar to the sublime.

Los Angeles Piano Quartet offers an appealing program

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

I DON'T remember ever seeing an audience at a Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society concert award the musicians a standing ovation.

Yet that's exactly what happened last Friday night in Carmel's Sunset Center Theater when the Los Angeles Piano Quartet were the featured artists in a particularly appealing and well chosen program of some of the finest compositions written for this combination of instruments.

Violinist Joseph Genualdi, Violist Randolph Kelly, cellist Peter Rejto and pianist James Bonn are all first class musicians and in the course of the evening their quality was indeed superior.

Beginning with the Mozart Piano Quartet in G Minor (K 478), the group gave a demonstration of true chamber music playing. Pianist Bonn a fleet, smooth and light-fingered player, blended into the close-knit ensemble with great musical sensitivity.

String blend

There was a feeling of instrumental deference as the players responded to each other's statements. The string blend was well in tune and almost vocally responsive in this quasi-operatic music.

The Andante was sympathetic and mellow toned. It had a spacious depth in its concept. Piano and strings were deftly balanced and in proper proportions. In the Rondeau, the approach was sparkling and had a fine Mozartean spirit, full of freshness and elegance.

The Dvorak Piano Quartet in D Major (Op. 23) is not often heard in concert and it was a pleasure to remake its acquaintance, particularly in a performance of such high quality. It is a truly ingratiating composition and the players made the most of this delightful score.

Far more technically demanding than the Mozart, it uses the strings as melodic individuals who take turns relaying the short melodic phrases of the first movement. The playing was secure and warm and had a seamless cohesion, with the piano part functioning both as accompaniment and as an integral part of the musical fabric.

Delightful originality

The Andantino con variazoni featured a plaintive melody which was so delightfully original and so continually inventive that it intrigued the ear and the heart most pleasantly. There was much excellent interplay between the cello and viola.

The Allegretto was an intricately constructed waltz and it became a remarkable example of fine ensemble with the pianist integrating the instrument into the string fabric rather than standing out as a virtuoso percussionist, except when the composer wanted him to do so.

But, they saved the best for last with an outstanding and memorable performance of the Piano Quartet in G Minor (Op. 25) of Brahms. Here, even greater delights were reached. It is a work of large proportions, full of power, broadly lyrical and luxuriantly virtuosic, and they were magnificent exponents of the music.

The first movement was smooth, full toned and strongly passionate. The playing was romantically inflected and eloquently delivered.

Brilliant level

The level of tone was brilliant. Each instrumentalist was top flight, yet they emphasized the importance of the musical content with great sensitivity, bringing out the differing textures of the composition.

The Intermezzo, a plaintive near-scherzo piece, had a quiet urgency to its muted string quality. The playing was sensitively gracious and it shimmered as it captured quicksilver mood and motion shifts.

The Andante was another grandly conceived movement, achieving rich sonorities and great depth of tone. Again there was flexibility and interpretive intelligence.

The rollicking, dashing Rondo alla Zingarese was delivered authoritatively, brilliantly capturing the fiery spirit and gypsy charm of the writing. All skills were called into the undertaking and the end result was stirring and totally convincing. The audience reacted with an explosive Bravo and standing applause.

As an encore, the slow movement of the Brahms C Minor Quartet was beautifully played and also received a standing ovation.

The Reel Stuff

'Untamed Heart' brings out best in Oscar nominee

By JOHN DETRO

ITS EASY to see how and why young Marisa Tomei recently drew an Oscar nomination as best supporting actress in another film. She dominates Untamed Heart (seen at Pacific Grove's Lighthouse Cinemas) via magical quirkiness.

Tomei, in fact, has some of the same rare qualities as those displayed by late Carmel resident Jean Arthur: strength behind vulnerability, wit, facial lights that can reflect tragedy or great joy or silliness or uncommon grace at an instant's notice.

Moreover, the camera likes her to an exceptional degree — so much so that other cast members look surer and subtler than usual simply by sharing screen space. Tomei's humanity comes through. When her physical movements turn from kid-clunky (love lost) to ballerina-bright (love relocated), one feels like cheering.

Awarded ★★★

The story here is simple: Minneapolis waitress (Tomei) keeps falling for men who don't value her warmth and down-to-earth niceness. She hooks up with a strange and silent dishwasher at the same coffee shop (Christian Slater) after he drives off two local weirdos who try to rape her in the snowy night park.

The Slater character grew up in an orphanage and still suffers from congenital heart damage. Their relationship thrives on paradox. "You're always staying away from love," she tells this intense loner, "and I'm always chasing it." And Tomei's character to her best waitress pal (Rosie Perez): "He doesn't make sense. I don't make sense. Together we make sense."

At the end, loss fuses with discovery — just as it does in daily mortal life. Tomei lets us know that her formerly sad Catherine will nevermore beg for attention, hugs, confirmation. Practical paradox again: simplicity becomes unassuming profundity; Catherine's essential gentleness stays the same and yet moves beyond victim's ways.

Director Tony Bill obviously had the overview. Tom Sierchio wrote the lines. Jost Vacano (photography), Cliff Edelman (music), Steven Jordan (production design) — all contributed solid craft. It still seems accurate to say Tomei's presence helped turn down Perez and Slater's usual volume and catalyze their best work in many moons. One does not answer such grace with braying — unless one wishes to bomb.

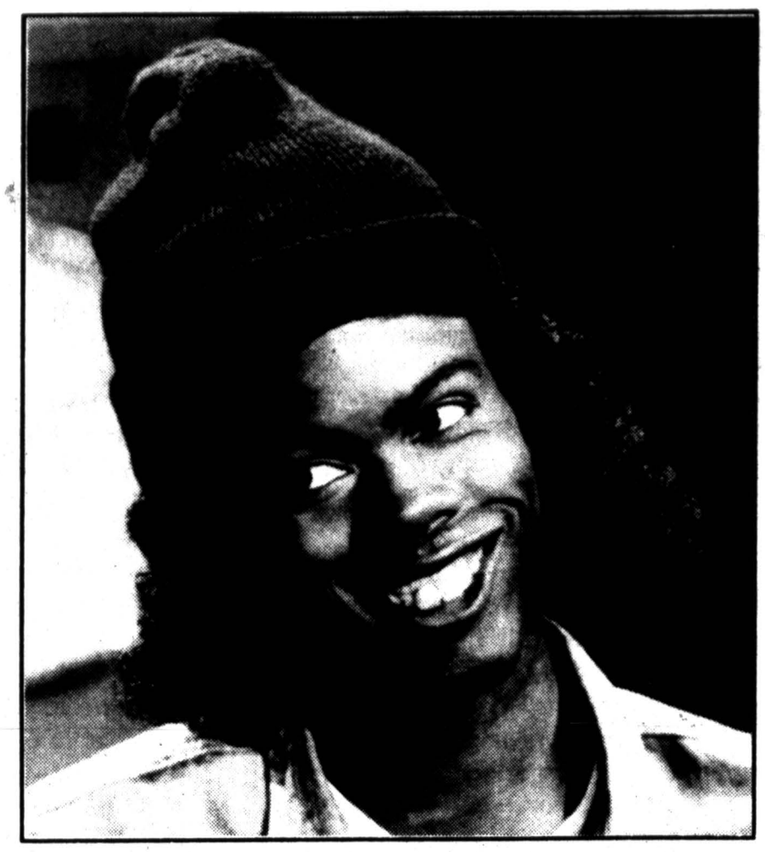
Bookish fellow

The oddball dishwasher's private reality includes books, tenderness, a pet pooch, even some wonders — certain phonograph records given him by a nun at the orphanage can stop the metaphorical rain (self-doubt) and the actual rain when they play and play. Maybe this dolt's a bit of a saint. Who knows? He's certainly worthy of the gladful love proferred by the waitress who blooms before our eyes.

For her part, Perez displays greater emotional range than we have seen previously. There's a kind side that her general persona (as promising film actress) has needed. Nice work.

One sequence imparts particularly terrible truth. Catherine asks her new boyfriend not to tell anyone about the rape attempt because "it's a real awkward thing for a girl." In her heart of hearts, she knows that she would be blamed.

Just like life.



CHRIS ROCK stars as Albert Brown, young man who transforms himself into "gangsta rapper" MC Gusto in the movie CB4. This satirical comedy has opened at Lighthouse Cinemas.

IT'S SCHEDULED to open on Friday, March 19. Donatello, Raphael and Leonardo examine the magic scepter that has the power to bring them home in New Line Cinema's action adventure — Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles III: The Turtles Are Back...In Time.

Barrymore ghost in Big Sur

By JAMES P. KINNEY

A POLISHED production of a hilarious contemporary comedy awaits local theater-goers creative and energetic enough to make the beautiful drive south to Big Sur's River Inn.

There the Big Sur Players in cooperation with the management of that classic brookside restaurant have resurrected, at least temporarily, an evening of dinner theater at its best: a delicious, well-served meal followed by an entertaining play.

Reservations from the peninsula at 1-667-2700 are strongly (and quickly) recommended because the play's run, as currently listed, is a short one.

Andrew Rally (J. Perham Slate) is a successful TV actor. On a whim he auditions for Hamlet in a New York City Shakespeare-in-the-Park production and, to his chagrin, wins the title role.

Plenty of fuel

While his misgivings are fueled by crass agent Gary (Rick Brown, Jr.) — "Andy, you idiot, we could be in L.A. right now making a fortune!" — adoring girlfriend Deirdre (Kim Candler) and veteran actress friend Lillian (Judith Share) both encourage him to take the step.

Felicia (Jennifer Green) tries to summon the ghost of John Barrymore in a botched seance attempt after informing Rally the apartment she has leased him was once occupied by the famous American stage actor. After the others leave, and accompanied by some stunning special effects for the Inn's small stage, John Barrymore's Ghost (Keith Decker) appears in full black Hamlet-like costume and announces grandly and testily that he has been summoned from the world of the shades to earth to prepare the insecure TV star for the role of his life.

Signature role

In what has to be a signature role for the well-known local actor, Decker's performance dominates and energizes the rest of the play. Strutting, posing, boasting of past onstage triumphs and offstage conquests, the old egotistical womanizer badgers, cajoles and finally begins to rehearse the intimidated younger man for the role of Hamlet.

The humor in this well-written comedy goes far deeper than anything found in contemporary TV's ubiquitous sit-coms. Much of it is mined with exquisite craft and cleverness by playwright Paul Rudnick's contrasting today's facile Big Bucks fame with the painful introversion and preparation essential for a great dramatic performance.

When Slate's TV star whines about the challenge facing him, Decker's Barrymore thunders, "I just rose from the dead; how was your morning?" When Rally sighs for the fleshpots of Hollywood, the Ghost chides him gently, "You are being offered a choice between fame and glory."

Decker's command of the bigger-than-life role is so total and energized that much of what Barrymore's Ghost says and does surely reflects this actor's own life-long philosophy of performing.

Not overshadowed

Yet Slate refuses to be overshadowed in what could be an overshadowed role, his genuine likeability and humility a natural foil to the Ghost's towering dominance.

Many of the play's best lines wind up in the agent's mouth. "This performing in the park is for squirrels," sneers Brown.

Petite Kim Candler, ever the focused performer, brings charm and sexy humor to a girlfriend whose embattled virginity is increasingly shown at risk not so much from without as from within.

Judith Share's older actress, who once bestowed her favors on Barrymore in the same apartment and wonders aloud if ghosts still retain bedroom skills, brings warmth and dignity to her role. Good accent too. Jennifer Green's realtor-medium is refreshingly kooky and compulsively contemporary.

I Hate Hamlet is directed by Jeremy Slate; stage-managed by Elizabeth Cooper; set design by Rus Gib; light design by Richard Jordan; an excellent original soundtrack by Kim Sheridan; sound by Greg Frederick.

Remaining scheduled performances are March 18, 19, 24, 25 and 26. Dinner at 6 p.m. and curtain two hours later.

Highly recommended as a splendid evening's dining and theatrical entertainment.

CHOREOGRAPHER TANDY Beal will be a panelist at the conference scheduled on Saturday, March 27, by Monterey Bay Women's Caucus for the Arts. Creative Feminine: Re-Enchanting Society will be held at Santa Cruz Art League. There also will be a concert, "movement celebration," small discussion groups led by professional artists. Call 685-0744 to get details such as cost. (Paul Schraub photo)

Gentle comedy evokes much laughter

By JAMES P. KINNEY

THE NOTION that a case of mistaken identity can radically change human lives for the better may seem too fragile an idea to sustain the demands of a full length play.

Proof that it can do so was the relentless audience laughter that greeted Larry Shue's gentle comedy, The Foreigner, directed by Diann Matheson, opening on MPC's main stage.

Froggy LeSueur, a bluff British noncom played with unerring confidence and Cockney accent by Robert Colter, brings shy, tongue-tied Charlie Baker (Michael Lojkovic) along on one of his annual visits to Georgia to train American recruits in the gentle art of placing and detonating high explosives.

Strangers cause misery

When LeSueur discovers that his friend's shyness renders him miserable in the presence of strangers, he hits on the idea of passing off Baker as a foreigner who speaks no English to the daffy owner and occupants of the down-on-its-luck Georgia fishing resort where he has regularly stayed in past years.

That his ploy works is demonstrated almost at once in the changed behavior of the resort's Good Old Gal owner Betty (Nancy Kocher), a witless young handyman Ellard (James Affinito), and restless boarder Catherine (Connie Erickson), nervously engaged to a sleazy Rev. David Marshall Lee (Craig Dunbar).

Alterations

"When Charlie's around, you forget your problems,"

Betty explains to the others blissfully. "He changes people."

Well, not everybody. Owen Musser (Bill Lindsay), a beer-bellied bullyboy with pretensions to getting elected sheriff, is threatened by the "foreigner's" demeanor and arranges an intimidating visit to the lodge by his local white hate group.

I put it to you, playgoers. Why is that so many excellent recent plays exposing America's pet foibles are set in the South? Steel Magnolias. Fried Green Tomatoes. The Foreigner. Surely the South has no monopoly on America's idiocies. Do we just identify them better from a distance? Or do Southerners view more honestly what ails our capitalist utopia?

Anyway, playwright Shue gets remarkable mileage out of his play's simple premise. The two women's mothering instinct reaches out to envelop and protect the defenseless foreigner.

A teacher born

An apparently doltish handyman becomes an ingenious, inventive teacher. Even Colter's tough Brit sergeant is astounded, if not pleased, at the changes in the lodge on his return.

Neither play nor production, however, is flawless. The English lesson in Act Two goes on too long. The underplaying of the Rev. Lee tends to bleach out the character's essential hypocrisy and nastiness, a necessary foil to Lindsay's bullyboy's overt, menacing violence. Craig Dunbar, an intelligent, sensitive actor, seems to have been reined in too tightly here.

Shyness shed

The greatest change happens within the "foreigner" himself. He sheds his inhibiting shyness and begins to enjoy the freedoms the situation offers him. Michael Lojkovic utilizes his remarkable verbal and physical agility to excel in the title role.

Colter, Kocher and Erickson also turn in energetic, consistently humorous performances. James Affinito is superb, bringing sly intelligence and endearing affability to his portrayal of what the others consider an irredeemable simpleton.

The single set, Betty Meeks' fishing resort in rural Georgia, is spacious and actor-friendly — high rough wooden walls and timbers, a magnificent stone fireplace, stuffed fish and deer heads impaled on the walls, even a glassed-in entranceway.

Kudos to scenic designer and master carpenter Patrick McEvoy; to tech director D. Thomas Beck and scenic artist Nicole Bryant. Costume design by Constance Gamiere; audio design by David Rigmaiden; stage managing by Lory Henning.

DRAWING FROM jazz, ballet, flamenco and tap — with song and dance excerpts from Broadway musicals — Carmel Ballet Academy will present its annual Choreography Night at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 20, in the school auditorium.

General admission for the occasion: $5 apiece. Call 624-3729 to see about reservations.

In what has become a traditional role reversal, the Academy's professional teachers will perform for their students and the public. Featured will be Carol Benton (ballet), Kristine Tarozzi (jazz), Jill Semke-Campen (tap), Catalina Zambrano (flamenco), Laura Akard (vocals).

PRODUCER NICK Williams will hold another jam session in his series at Carmel's Vista Lobos Park (the old Hayward building on Third between Junipero and Torres).

The get-together will start at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 18, and include refreshments along with optional donations.

Nick says MPTV will film this particular jam. Army players, Santa Cruz pros and Williams students will be numbered among the guest artists.

Normally drawn are such local musicians as Bob Blankenship, Dave Clay, Nick himself, Bucky Boynes, Judy Blair, Dasher (David Kempton), Buddy Jones, Bob Phillips, Dennis Murphy, Jackie Coon, on and on.

Women's issues get major KAZU airing

CELEBRATING WOMEN'S History Month, KAZU Public Radio offers a half dozen pertinent specials:

• Sunday, March 21, at 2 p.m. Betty Friedan discussing "paradigm shifts in the women's movement." She says the movement must travel from the "radical fringe" to create a society where women's issues become mainstream concerns.

• Tuesday, March 23, at noon — Columnist Molly Ivins on "journalists in an environment of oppression." She says media workers have failed to retain their independence and objectivity.

• Thursday, March 25, at 10 a.m. — Panel discussion regarding women in theater.

• Thursday, March 25, at 9 a.m. — About Native American activist Lakota Harden. A single mother of two, she now works with the American Indian Movement on land rights and related issues.

• Thursday, March 25, at 2 p.m. and Saturday, March 27, at 7 p.m. — Experimental musician and composer Laurie Anderson discusses various avant garde musical styles and her role. Performances included.

• Sunday, March 28, at 2 p.m. — Author and poet Susan Griffin talks about the creation of her radio play Voices. Dramatic readings from that work. Griffin also will discuss "the ongoing struggle of women writers to overcome prejudice and get published."

Among the greats

NEWSBREAK: The great bassist Eugene Wright will join flugelhornist Jackie Coon's group — starting Thursday night, March 18 — on those weekly no-cover gigs at Casa Cafe in downtown Monterey. That word comes from Jackie's drummer, Dottie Dodgion, who says her old friend Eugene "simply wished to play here regularly" after bassist Buddy Jones left the unit "for other opportunities." A Los Angeles resident, Wright worked with late tenorman Gene Ammons and scores of other giants.

LOCAL RADIO personality Buddy Lowe mentioned some weeks ago that it was in the works. And here's the official announcement: the first annual Santa Cruz Blues Festival will be staged on Sunday, May 30, at Aptos Village Park.

All three of that event's producers have ties to the Moe's Alley Blues Club in Santa Cruz — Phil Lewis (owner), David Claytor (booker), Bill Welch (sound man and Phil's close advisor).

And how did Buddy know? "He'll be doing some MC chores for us," Lewis said during a telephone interview.

The talent lineup put forth by Phil: Albert Collins, Jimmy Rogers, Pinetop Perkins, Rod Piazza and The Mighty Flyers, Texas blueswoman Angela Strehli, Soul Drivers, Bob Lowery with Virgil Thrasher.

Ducats already have gone on sale at Moe's Alley and all Ticketmaster outlets.

ANOTHER SOUTHWESTERN blueswoman — Sue Foley — has been signed for Tuesday night, March 23, at Doc Ricketts' Lab. Joe Louis Walker and his Boss Talkers will be coming in on March 31. Details: 649-4241.

SPECIAL SEGMENTS on female jazz contributors are being featured throughout this Women's History Month by KJAZ Radio (on the MPTV cable). Producing them is Sherrie Tucker, who attended Monterey Peninsula College and got experience doing jazz shows — as The Perfect Stranger — over KAZU Public Radio.

Sherri's Artist Vignettes run on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 10:50 a.m. and 9:50 p.m. Upcoming subjects: Jane Ira Bloom (3/18), Jessica Williams (3/23), Lil Hardin Armstrong (3/25), Myra Melford (3/30).

BARBARA MURPHY'S Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove offers events of interest to this column's readers. Like so:

- Friday night, March 19 — Singers Steve Gillette and Cindy Mangsen with blues, ballads, other original songs. Eight o'clock start; $8 per.
- Saturday night, March 20 — Windham Hill Records guitarists Edward Gerhard and Bill Mize. Eight o'clock and $8.
- Jazz drummer and composer James Zitro brings in his Zytron group on Monday night, March 22. At last report, the front line had Kenny Stahl on flutes and alto saxist Dave Valdez. At $6 apiece; 7:30.

GroveMont players plan opening of wild, mysterious farce

THE WILD farce called Country Cops opens this week at GroveMont Theater's Monterey Playhouse (425 Washington).

That show's set at a small town police station in Australia. A compulsive detective from the big city must solve a politically volatile murder. One major critic credited Robert Lord's work with "plot power that drives the play to a zestful finale."

Discounted previews (tickets at $6 apiece) will happen on Thursday and Friday nights, March 18 and 19. For advance ducats, reserved seats or credit card reservations, call Monterey County Theater Alliance at 655-3200.

The "gala premiere" will be on Saturday night, March 20. These tickets cost $20 each and include a buffet with the cast after the final curtain.

Then Country Cops will run Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 7 p.m. through April 25. Prices: $12 general, $20 for students, seniors, military. (Costs will be cut in half at the March 21 show.)

Directed by John Rousseau, the cast features company members Michael Jacobs, Kevin Nolan Caston, Jerry Gill and (in multiple roles) Jeffrey T. Heyer and Lynn Whiting.

AND TO help celebrate springtime's start, Monterey Bay Theaterfest (a GroveMont project) is sponsoring a Monterey Bay Arts and Crafts Fair on Saturday and Sunday, March 21 and 22, at Monterey's Custom House Plaza.

Vendors will offer handmade original arts and crafts as well as international foods. There is no admission charge — and the free entertainment will include music and poetry.

Information: 649-0340.

CARMEL'S CHERRY Hall still has openings in its theater scheduling for this year.

Anyone interested in producing a show there during 1993 should call Robert Reese at 624-7491.

GroveMont's Theater Arts Center (at 320 Hoffman in New Monterey) is available for rent. The facility contains stage, platform seating for 93 audience members, dressing room, concession area, sound and lighting systems.

There also is a "materials workshop," says Michael Jacobs, "which can be rented at even lower rates." Call 649-0340.

ACTOR TAELEN Thomas portrays author John Steinbeck on Wednesday and Saturday evenings throughout March on Cannery Row.

He says the one-man show includes "questions from the audience as well as tales of Salinas boyhood, the real Ed Ricketts, Mack and the boys, Flora and the girls and Steinbeck's adventures as a struggling writer."

Admission: $7. Refreshments are available. Call 646-1700 for complete details.

MICHAEL JACOBS (left) and Jeffrey T. Heyer appear in Country Cops at GroveMont's Monterey Playhouse. (See Theater Roundup for full details on the offering.)

Art group announces free public program

CENTRAL COAST Art Association will sponsor a free public demonstration by Susan Dorf at 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 22, in Room 10 of Sunset Center.

Spokesperson Joanne Light says Dorf's presentation will reflect "the mythology and fantasy of Mexico."

CCAA member Red Ress — "showcase artist of the month" — will display her watercolors at the session.

Meanwhile, Phillip Bleicher took first award (for an acrylic painting) at CCAA's 31st Bi-Annual Competitive now showing at Sunset Center's Marjorie Evans Gallery.

According to Light, judges Howard Bradford and Sam Colburn made these awards as well: Ethel Alvy's oil painting (second), Sally Sanders watercolor (third), Doris Thompson oil (fourth).

Evelyn Wood (oil) and Ronald Bean (watercolor) drew honorable mentions.

Mystery writers pledge appearance at Harrison; book fund to benefit

A PAIR of the most highly-praised mystery writers of the 1990s — Karen Kijewski and T. Jefferson Parker — will be at Harrison Memorial Library for the final Authors-by-the-Sea session of this season.

They will appear there beginning at 8 p.m. on Friday, March 26. The public is invited; tickets may be bought ($12 each) at the library's circulation desk with all proceeds going into book purchases.

Refreshments prepared by library staffers will be served following the question-and-answer part of the evening. Authors donate their time and travel expenses, while their lodging and meals are provided by local inns and restaurant owners.

DiRONA™

The Covey Restaurant Earns Top Award!

Distinguished Restaurants of North America recently announced that the Covey Restaurant at Quail Lodge Resort and Golf Club* has won the prestigious DiRoNA Award. It is the only restaurant award in North America with as stringent evaluation criteria as those in Western Europe. The Covey ranks among the 313 finest in the US, Canada and Mexico.

The Covey and Raffaello's in Carmel are the only two restaurants in Central California to be so honored.

The DiRoNA Award reviews were conducted by highly trained professional inspectors who anonymously visited each restaurant and evaluated every aspect of their dining experience.

So take a tip from the experts and make The Covey Restaurant at Quail Lodge Resort and Golf Club part of your dining experience.

Located at Quail Lodge just 3.5 miles from Hwy. 1 on Carmel Valley Road. Cocktails from 5 pm - dinner every evening from 6:30 pm. Jackets and reservations requested. (408) 624-1581

In the Chinese Kitchen by Shirley Fong-Torres. Pacific View Press, Berkeley. 218 pages. $12.95.

Shirley Fong-Torres has fond memories of slipping through the back door to the kitchen of the old Trader Vic's in Oakland and snacking on Asian delicacies.

"I was just going to see my Dad, who was a chef there. I didn't know I was eating world-famous food," she says today with a twinkle in her eye. "I guess it rubbed off."

During her childhood, her family operated Chinese restaurants in Hayward, Oakland, Reno and Amarillo, Texas. One of her earliest memories is waking up from afternoon naps next to 100-pound bags of rice in the restaurant supply room. Later, in her teenage years, Shirley learned about Chinese food, service and people while she worked in the family restaurant — The Bamboo Hut — in Hayward.

By the thousands

"I must have peeled thousands of prawns, wrapped endless won tons, egg rolls and packaged paper-wrapped chicken," she writes in the introduction to her new book. "I was at Dad's side to learn how to make gravies and sauces. We instinctively honed our skills with customer service by waiting on tables. Years were to pass before I came to fully appreciate the knowledge of food and people my parents instilled in us."

As an adult, Shirley worked for Levi-Strauss Corporation, but through a quirk of fate re-entered the world her parents had prepared her for. She was chosen to be a contestant on the television game show Wheel of Fortune. Big winnings didn't come, but she marks that date — Feb. 18, 1987 — as a turning point in her life. Her new Chinatown walking tour and cooking company (Wok Wiz) got so much national media exposure as a result of her appearance that she was on her way to becoming a successful businesswoman.

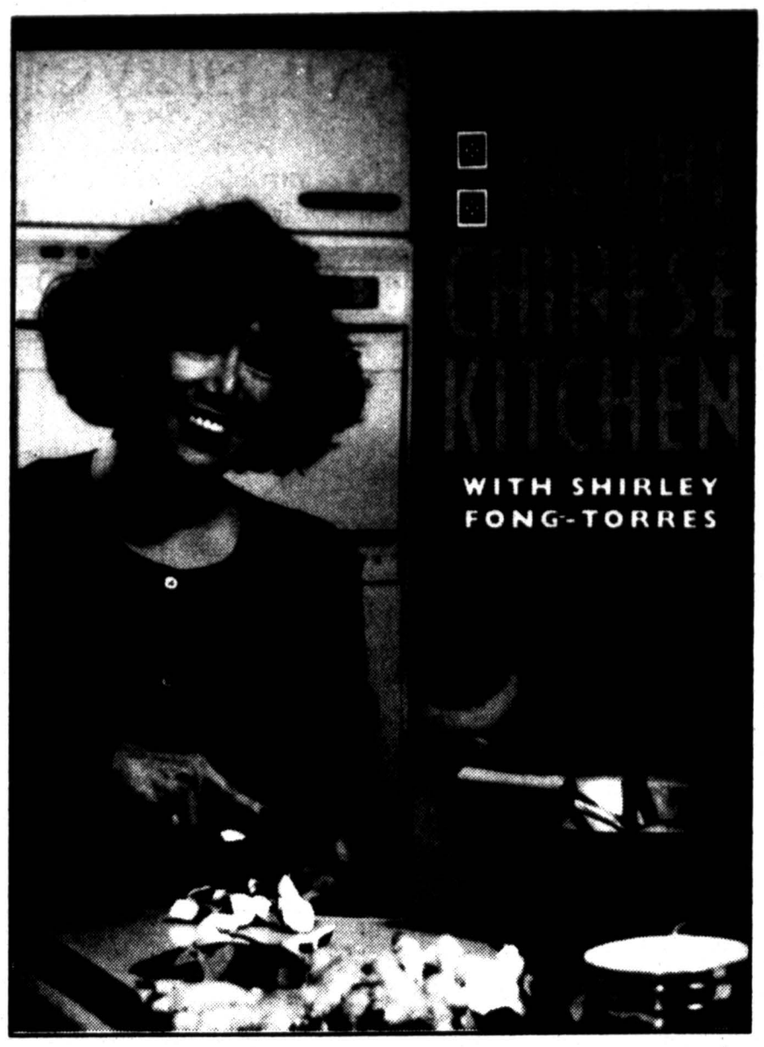
Since then, Fong-Torres has written three books, been named entrepreneur of the year by the San Francisco Convention & Visitor Bureau, appeared on countless television and radio programs and led thousands of people on her behind-the-scenes Wok Wiz walking tours through Chinatown.

And then. . . .

But you can be sure there is more to come. She just finished filming an "info-mercial" in New York and is talking about doing a cooking series on public television.

In the Chinese Kitchen is the culmination of years of experience at the table of a loving family. The recipes are, in Shirley's words, "clear-cut."

Sections on Chinese kitchen equipment and ingredients are simple and easy to understand. Recipes start with Asian Chicken Wings and end with Yee Foo Won Ton, with hundreds of tempting dishes in between. Her comments add a personal touch to each page.



Sharing any experience with Shirley is a delight, and this book is no exception. A friendly companion and fun to cook with — that is how I would describe both Shirley Fong-Torres and her new book.

PEPPER PLANT HOT SAUCE
It's not too hot and not too mild, this delicious California-style sauce that can put the fun back into eating familiar dishes. With its pickled peppers and secret recipe, the sauce has begun appearing in area restaurants and markets. (Some folks have actually switched restaurants in order to put Pepper Plant on their breakfast eggs.) Ask your favorite grocer and chef to order by calling the nearest distributor – Frank of Gilroy's Good Egg Co. at 1-842-7881. Postscript: Pepper Plant makes a great Bloody Mary. And there's a new, tasty variation – Pepper Plant Sauce with garlic added. Also Salsa BBQ Sauce and Seasoning Spice.

THE SAN JOSE FLEA MARKET
A thousand garage sales...a hundred farmer's markets...an international bazaar... a country fair...The San Jose Flea Market is Northern California's largest attraction. Open air shopping for fanfastic bargains, good food & refreshments, live entertainment, and fun are in store for the whole family. Over 120 acres of selling spaces, parks, a 1/4 mile shade-covered produce row, more than 2,000 stores, easy in-and-out parking, amusements and 25+ restaurants are devoted to your pleasure and comfort. Open Wed.-Sun. On weekends the entire flea market grounds are open. Wednesday is the busiest day, while Thursdays and Fridays are more like a neighborhood flea market. Admission is free. Parking is $3 per car on the weekends and free parking weekdays. Join our flea market family shoppers at the original (California's oldest) San Jose Flea Market. 1590 Berryessa Road, San Jose between Highways 101 and 680. (408) 453-1110.

Beat the Quake! California Earthquake Preparedness Steps to Take

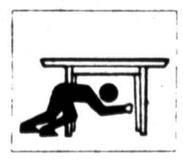
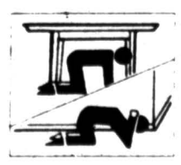
When an earthquake strikes

Duck, Cover and Hold

Whether you are in your home, a school classroom, a high-rise or another type of building, it is important to know how to protect yourself during an earthquake. Practice what to do during an earthquake and teach yourself and your family members to react automatically when the shaking starts. If you are outdoors when the shaking starts, get into an open area away from trees, buildings, walls and power lines. If you are indoors, follow the steps below.



DUCK
DUCK or drop down to the floor



COVER
Take COVER under a sturdy desk, table or other furniture. If that is not possible, seek COVER against an interior wall and protect your head and neck with your arms. Avoid danger spots near windows, hanging objects, mirrors or tall furniture.

HOLD
If you take cover under a sturdy piece of furniture, HOLD on to it and be prepared to move with it. HOLD the position until the ground stops shaking and it is safe to move.
